CHESTERTOWN - - JULY 30, 1887 SULLIVAN'S FIRST DEFEAT.

tana Who Persuades Him to be Whipped When the John L. Sullivan combination made its last Western trip a little event took place out at Helena, Montana, which VIRGINIA PINE SIDING, has never been in the papers, according to the Dakota Bell. As is well kown John usually takes in the towns when out on his CYPRESS WEATHERBOARDING, trips, especially the Western ones, where WHITE PINE WEATHERBOARDING he usually sees much that is new. On this occasion at Helena he was making the rounds with a couple of the members of the combination and a local sport, and it was DOORS, BLINDS, SASH, pretty late when they struck a large saloon which, perhaps, more than any other, was frequented by the stockmen. There were probably twenty-five or thirty cowboys in ped up and said: "So ye'r John L., be ye?" "Well, I want 'o say I kin lick ye the Call and Examine. best day ye ever saw?"

"Very likely," replied Sullivan starting. out, seeing that the man had been drinking and not wishing to have trouble with him. ALL INQUIRIES ANSWERED PROMPTLY. "Oh, ye needn't 'very likely' me-I kin do it an' I'm goin' to! Ye needn't be 'shamed to fight with me, the boys kin tell T.W. ELIASON, Jr. ve I know how to fight." ye I know how to fight."
"Ye bet he kin!" roared half a dozen, "an' we're goin' to see him do it!" Here most of them drew their six-shooters, some guarded the door, while the rest covered the other members of the Sullivan ons, and formed a ring. He took off a heavy revolver and handed it to a friend who stood in front of the ring "Buck, ye jes' hold that an' keep it right behind me so I can get it thunderin' quick if I step back and want it." Then he turned to Sullivan and added: "Now I don't want none o' yer hurr'can fightin', nor rushin', nor monkey business uv any kind. This is jes' a straight, fair fight an' ef ye go to tryin' to knock me out I'll grab that air gun tryin' tryin' to knock me out I'll grab that air gun tryin' tryin' to knock me out I'll grab that air gun tryin' tryi the only thing he could do was to let him knocked the fellow out, for though he was big and stout he had no science, but there was that friend of his right behind him all the time holding that revolver out invitingly, and already cocked. They kept it up for fully fifteen minutes, or till the cowboy was tired out, and Sullivan never more than tapped his oppnent, though he took several quite heavy blows himself. At last they stopped and shook hands, while the boys yelled till they were hoarse and fired their six-shooters at the ceiling till Sullivan was deaf, after which his opponent treated the whole crowd and patted him on the back
