CHESTERTOWN - JUNE 29, 1889.

THE OTHER FELLOW.

How seldom do our dreams come true!
The very thing our fancy lets
Us hope in time will be our own,
Some other fellow always gets. We fall in love: our mind's diseased
The brain is in a foolish whirl;
And while we worship from afar
Some other fellow gets the girl.

We try for wealth, deluded fools!
As men from Adam's time have done;
And while we toil, and strive, and fret,
Some other fellow yanks the bun. We yearn for fame, and struggle To win some measure of renown, And find that to posterity Some other fellow's name goes down. Ah! what torment life would be,
If we were of the hope bereft,
That in some fairer world than this
That the other fellow might get left!
—W. H. HILLS.

Stopped the Shooting.

Just before the fight at Williamsburg my company was on picket at the front. The man on the left of me, as I went on guard at ten o'clock one night, was a Dutchman named Jake Klein. He was a good-natured, obedient fellow, and not easily put out, but that night he was out of sorts, and as the rebel pickets were constantly firing in our direction, Jake finally got his dander up. It was against orders to leave his post, but after a while he came lumbering through the bushes like an ox team, and growled out:

"Vhell, shall we do somethings?"

"What can we do?" I asked in return.

"Take 'em some prisoner, eh?"

"You'd better go back and keep quiet."

"But does rebels vas shooting all der vile.

Dot vhasn't fair play. I pelief I go ofer and "Well, hurry up," I replied, with a laugh; and to my surprise and consternation he started off in the direction of a rebel picket post. I called to him but he answered back through the darkness:

"It whas all right. I make dot feller behave himself or bring him in a prisoner!"

He was gone half an hour before I heard anything. Then there was a crushing in the bushes, some swearing and growling, and Jake appeared with a full-rigged Confederate infantryman, having a firm clutch as they came to a halt. "He doan' promise to keep shtill, und I pring him along."

"Drat the onery Dutchman," growled the Johnny, "he stole up behind me and jumped on me like a mountain before I heard "Who vhas some Duchmans?" said Jake.

he cried, but he was turned over to head quarters, and Private Jake Klein had "Cor-poral," as a handle to his name after a few
