The Thanksgiving Goose by Christopher G. Hazard

PHIRAM STRUT wrote "The Puritan tradition must be preserved in America," as he labored on his Thanksgiving day oration. "Our country has indeed become a new world, so cosmopolitan is its character, and our task is the Americanization of America. Personal integrity and honest work are the essential elements of our national welfare." He continued: "These laudable and well-expressed sentiments so pleased their author that he was reading them the third time when his boy Samuel, surnamed the Judge on account of his argumentativeness, and his girl Louise made evident the fact of their disputation under the library window. It appeared that the discussion concerned the material for the approaching feast and that the question was 'turkey or goose, arrangements having been made for the traditional bird, but a relative having signified his intention of bestowing as an alternative the mate of a gander. "Father thinks we couldn't be thankful for anything but a turkey," I heard him say that it is as much the emblem of the day as the eagle is of our country. He said that last Thanksgiving," said the Judge. "Well," replied his sister, "it doesn't make so very much difference to me what it is as long as there is enough of it and plenty of stuffing, but I think mother ought to settle it, she's the cook." "We'll have a goose anyhow, if you're there," rejoined the ruffled Samuel, but he assented to a change of venue and to bringing the case before the lady of the house, and the court was adjourned to the kitchen. Mrs. Strut being absent, however, the opinion of Dinah, who was agitating the various constituents of pumpkin and mince pies, was desired. With no result from this busy official but a continuation of the song that she was singing: Grasshopper sitting on a switch-eater vine, a switch-eater vine, Turkey gobbling come up behind and ruffled him off de switch-eater vine. The children were left to the conclusion that turkey had won the suit, until the returning mistress reversed the decision, replying to Samuel's "But I think turkey is so dear" with the remark "I think it, too." So that they all marched to the goose step when the day came round. The result rather worried Mr. Strut, however. Combined with the facts that his address had seemingly failed to enrapture his audience, and that it had given a rather hollow sound even to himself, and the further fact that his concerted disappointment over the absence of his favorite bird had induced a fit of indigestion, was an increasing consciousness that he was himself a member of the talkers' brigade rather than a soldier in the army of tollers at work upon the foundations of a better future. Although unpunctured by age and disability, he was off the road of actual affairs, being of that leisure class that, living upon accumulated competence, spends its time in discussion rather than persuasion, out of contact with the hard conditions of the real service of progress. In the endeavor to walk off his chagrin and dissatisfaction, Mr. Strut came upon a group of Italian laborers and was struck by their hearty and joyous dealing with the question of social progress as they toiled in their draw near to another force of aliens who were at work upon the foundations of a new building. These last had taken of sand and rocks and cement and poured the mass into a concrete mixer, placing upon the top of the machine an American flag. These concrete illustrations of true Americanism so affected the observer that he might have been heard as he told himself that there was more progress going on than he was actually concerned in, that sand, cement and pieces of Plymouth Rock were still going into the racial material of New America, and that to build American institutions under the American flag was also his business. He even said to himself in his sense of usefulness and humiliation that perhaps he, himself, had been a Thanksgiving goose.

WINTER TO BE SEVERE, SAGE OF HILLS SAYS

"This coming winter will be long and a hard one," Jacob Marklong, ninety-four, sage of the hills, prophesied today, basing his predictions on signs learned in a lifetime spent in the Pigeon Hills, near here. The old man, whose forecasts are near the mark much of the time, has been trapping small fur-bearing animals and finds that unusually heavy "under fur" this autumn is noticeable on rabbits, racoon, opossum, mink and weazels. This is a never-failing sign, he asserts.

WAS NOT FIT TO DO HER WORK

Dreadful Condition of Mrs. Fullerton's Health Remedied by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Clearfield, Pa.—"I cannot begin to tell you how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me in every way. Before taking it I couldn't stand on my feet without pains running all through my whole body from my waist down, just like threads pulling. I was not fit to do any work. My mother got me to try the Vegetable Compound and I have found great benefit, and I not only recommend it for such troubles, but to build up the whole system. I have used it for most every-thing that gets wrong with me. When I begin to feel nervous and irritable I don't stop long in getting a bottle of the Vegetable Compound if I haven't got one in the house. It gives a fine appetite and makes a new woman of me. You may use this testimonial in my own town or anywhere else, and I will answer any letters I receive." — Mrs. RUSH FULLERTON, 525 S. 2nd Street, Clearfield, Pa.

If you are suffering from nervous troubles, irritability, give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. For sale by druggists everywhere.

"College Humor," new department of strikingly humorous bits from College publication, begins in Sunday's Baltimore American.
