GOD IN NATURE

The following poem was sent the News by a little boy Ray Byron: Trees and roses bloom so fair, Away, away, away out there, In fairland so bright and gay, Where the fairies dance and play God made that land just for them.

Leave It to Cupid

By LEELE STONE (Copyright.)

BETTY LEE found the "Public Notices" in the paper the Sunday she was fifteen. Here was a magazine cover profile, and she was the daughter of strict parents. Their home was in Grangerville, a Hudson river hamlet. All week she typed letters in her father's real estate office. Sundays she revelled in the world of her dreams—New York—mirrored for her eager, supple mind by the Sunday paper. Betty relieved the scattered sections of the paper after her father had flung it on the floor four ways from his Morris chair, sorted it into sectional sequence, and carried it to a silent, leafy dell in the woods nearby. Sparkling eyes rejoiced with "Peachy J. Plagg of Borough of Manhattan," whose address was wanted by Glasgow solicitors. Waiting at the lawyer's office, surely, was a good, sized golden plum for Peachy from a renegade uncle, perhaps, whose family had burned his picture when he skipped with the church funds and lost himself in the diamond fields of Kimberley. Keenly imaginative, Betty never missed these public notices. They were her first dramas. She built a story round each one, complete, with cast of characters, fitting sequence and a climax, sad or glad, at the whim of her mood. Ever since reading the story of Dorothy Blaine, describing how Yates Chandler, famous young illustrator, had found her pale and hungry, crouching on a subway bench, and lifted her to such fame as a model that her face became a familiar feature of every newsstand and library table in the land—ever since then Betty had resolved to go to New York and become an illustrator's model. And, if possible, Yates Chandler's model.

It would be so much more inspiring than typewriting. How to do this without estranging her parents? They definitely disapproved of Betty's dream, and there had been many a family "scene" over it. An idea popped into her head from a bright, blue sky. Why not write him frankly and simply and explain her dream? Send him one of her high school graduation pictures which every one admired! Finally, ask him to have a heart-to-heart talk with dad when dad went to New York next time.

Both letter and photograph were posted to the Chandler studio address. For a week Betty frantically anticipated a reply. But no response! A month after her disappointment Betty and her friend, Miriam, were motoring in Miriam's small roadster one Sunday afternoon. The lacing of low hills that fringed the tiny valley town on the river was the color of a gorgeous carpet of Bagdad, for autumn was early.

The girls were hearing a sharp, dangerous down-grade cue. It had been sprinkling for ten minutes and the road was ripe for skidding. Miriam, driving, approached the splay of the curve carefully, her right side wheels in the gravel shoulder of the road. Suddenly the rear end of long roadster was disclosed just ahead, its nose jammed into an immense pine tree that towered majestically aloof from its neighbors on the exact edge of the highway.

Miriam shoved both brakes into "stuck" grip, knowing that the shoulder of the road would prevent skidding, and choked off her gas. Their little car stopped in thirty feet, almost touching the rear of the big roadster, which was skewed out at an angle well into the roadway. Quite evidently a narrow turn, sudden braking, and a swift skid, with the pine tree for a bumper, was the answer to this accident.

"Hello, there!" A somewhat unsteady voice reached the girls as they hurried from their car. They saw a tall, well-dressed man rising rather shyly from the low underbrush behind the big pine. "I call that stupid driving, don't you?" He smiled and came to them. "Clucked me right over the windshield! Wonder if you girls could squeeze me in with you and take me to the nearest garage?" Betty's heart almost stopped before it sent the blood thrilling through her body in a wild, entrancing rush. This fine face she recognized in the fading light belonged to Yates Chandler.

As they started off in the little car, the artist regarded Betty with close scrutiny. "Haven't I seen you somewhere?" "I sent you my picture six weeks ago. I'm Betty Lee of Grangerville," Betty answered simply. "What luck!" Yates Chandler postively beamed. "Let's bow to the great god of Coincidence! I was on my way to call on you and your mother and father this afternoon when I met the pine tree so forcibly. I could see from your picture that you were an unusual type, and I want you for a new series of illustrations." Chandler's charm and sure sincerity won Betty's parents to happy acquiescence in her dream before supper was over. Later the artist and his new model strolled together down the quaint Lover's Lane that followed the broad lead of the moon-lit river, and a companionship was commenced that soon called for the loving care of Cupid.

If the American people is to be saved from this extortion, it will be by the efforts of the Democrats in the U. S. Senate and such of the Republicans as may join with them in knocking down the schedules of the Hawley bill as it was passed by the Republican House of Representatives after the secret hearings by the Ways and Means Committee and the gag rules on the floor.

Eshelman GUARANTEED FEED

LAYING MASH

Wild hens never layed 300 eggs a year. Domestic fowl can, and sometimes do, but only if their owners make it possible. We have a record of one flock in Vermont last season which has even a far better performance—it was fed Eshelman Laying Mash. This was unusual—but it's not unusual for farmers and poultry.

WE SELL Eshelman GUARANTEED FEED to meet every feeding requirement for livestock and poultry—backed by 87 years' experience—made of only the finest materials—economical.
