100 YEARS

On a 1000 acre tract near Baltimore there is being shown the history of American railroading, from the beginning, with locomotives and cars from various epochs—all in honor of the one hundredth anniversary of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

The Baltimore & Ohio, first in the United States to handle for the public passengers and freight, reminds you that this country is gradually becoming respectably ancient. Two big stores in New York City, Hearn's and Arnold Constable's have just reached the respectable age of one hundred. And the age is less important than the marvelous improvements of one hundred years.

The next step will be the flying machine, with rearrangement of man's living habits, re-creating of population centres and land values. Buy the right hill and mountain tops within two hundred miles of big industrial centres now, and your grandchildren will bless you.

America's earliest inhabitants are said to have lived in trees, which may account for some folks being up a tree most of the time.

SELLING JOB

"If Lincoln had only a dozen books and Garfield learned to read while riding a tow-path mule, what can the child-to-day do with present school equipment—if he really wants to?" Publisher J. P. O'Furey, of the Cedar County News, and member of the school board at Harington, Nebr., puts the above question in clinching his argument for greater vision in the handling of our educational system. He contends that we complain of high taxes but go merrily about the job of building up propaganda which leaves the child with the impression that "school" is a monster destroying his liberties.

Current cartoons on the opening of school, which almost in every instance put the wrong emphasis on what school really means to the child brought forth this most interesting comment from Mr. O'Furey.

"While we are complaining of high taxes I wonder how much useless expense is caused by impressing upon the minds of children that school is destroying their liberties?"

"And what does the mental opposition cost the country?"

"And how much worry does it cause school authorities, while the kiddies are young, and to civic authorities as they grow older?"

Isn't it about time we all start "selling" the school idea to our children?"

Two is company, three is a crowd and four is an average load for a two-passenger automobile.

DISCIPLINE AT HOME

Some parents become aggravated with school teachers when disciplinary measures are applied a little too severely. Before condemning the teacher, it might be a good idea to examine their own responsibility in the matter.

When discipline becomes necessary at school, it is good reason to believe that discipline has been lacking at home. It scarcely seems fair to blame teachers for resorting to methods that should have been followed at home.

Teachers do not obligate themselves to assume the role of parents when they accept a position in the schools. They merely agree to teach the children sent to them with the best ability they possess. They have no control over their conduct outside the school room; neither are they responsible for the traits inherent in the children which interfere with the orderly management of the school.

These are questions that parents should consider seriously—especially when the child reaches high school age. If they have made a failure at home, what reason have they to expect that the child's conduct will be exemplary in school?"

The state of Michigan has lifted the ban on speed, evidently on the theory of what's the use. There's a society for everything else—why not one for the prevention of wasted effort? Little did our grandmothers ever think that their grandchildren would live to see the day when women would be known by their knees.

Anyway a church that gets robbed, like the one in Chicago, ought to feel complimented.

CHRIST FOR ALL—ALL FOR CHRIST

The Word of God

What breaks the connection between God and man? Answer, read—Isaiah 59:1, 2. GOD WILL GUIDE THEE.—Be ye not as the horse, or as the mule, which have no understanding; whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle. I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go. Psalm 32:9-8.

PRAYER.—O Spirit of the living God, we need thy guidance, for the way is strange to us. Keep us from self will. Make us teachable and then show us the way to walk.

The Lancer

Harry S. Russell

Maybe you know it and maybe you don't but a real circus, and by that I mean a circus which has horses, carries its own blacksmith. The particular circus that I have in mind has the original of the famous Longfellow poem, "The Village Blacksmith." Big of arm and brawny, he is honest and above board in all his dealings. But what to me is just as important, he is entertaining.

One day the "Smithy" and I fell into a discussion of the relative importance of the blacksmith of today and the blacksmith of the day before the automobile. Somehow, probably because I had never given it any thought, I had associated a blacksmith with horses alone. This blacksmith friend of mine assured me that there were lots of people in the world—especially garage keepers—who couldn't get along without a blacksmith. To him "Smithy" his profession has always been an important one. To put it in his words: "It is just as important today as it was in the days that King Solomon built his temple."

"You know," he continued, "but I didn't, "that after the temple was finished Solomon held a contest to determine which worker had done the most in the construction of the building. Thousands of workers were in the contest. One by one they were eliminated until but two remained, the tailor and the blacksmith. The tailor, happy that he had remained in the contest until the final, jumped up and down with joy. But alas it was a sorrowful jumping for him. He jumped so hard his scissors fell from his pocket and broke. Then his joy left him and he was mad. To the blacksmith he must go to have his scissors mended. He saw the prize slipping out of his grasp for this proved that the blacksmith was of more importance than he. Maddier and madder he became and when he got his scissors back from the blacksmith he stooped over and snipped the blacksmith's apron right up to the middle. And that is why until this day a blacksmith's apron is always split up the middle. You never saw one that wasn't did you?"

And I was forced to admit that I hadn't.

I saw that I had a real source of information and when my eyes strayed to a pile of horseshoes I asked, "Why is the finding of a horseshoe considered lucky?" Without a second's pause he started in: "You don't know that. Well, once upon a time, so the legend goes, a horse walked into the shop of an old German blacksmith and said he wanted shoes placed on all four feet. Now this old German had never heard a horse talk before and he was scared, and very suspicious. He said he wouldn't do it. And then a terrible light came in the eyes of the horse and he said, "If you don't I'll kick your shop down." The blacksmith was afraid and agreed to put the shoes on the horse. When he lifted the hoof he found that his suspicions were correct. It was a cloven hoof. So were the other three. It was the devil all right and the old German knew it. His keen brain began to work. He put the shoes on hot and turned the nails the wrong way and drove them into the hoof. He finished his job and the horse, or devil, paid him and walked out. Now the devil hadn't gone far before his feet began to hurt. And they hurt more and more every step he took. Finally he could stand it no longer so he sat right down in the middle of the road and pulled them off. He trotted away as fast as he could and left the shoes lying in the road. From that day to this the devil has never liked horseshoes and whenever he sees one he will go away off his track to keep out of its way."

The Boy Scout medal for the week goes to a lady of the "white tops." As the circus train pulled out of town one of the lady performers leaned out of a car window. As she did one of her gloves dropped to the platform below. The train gathered momentum to make the rather steep grade ahead. The lady reached to her lap where the other glove was lying and tossed it out the open window. When asked why she replied, "One glove is no good to me and one glove is no good to the finder, so why not let the finder have them both."

"Arthur seems to find it hard to meet his expenses in school." "Gosh, not me. I meet them wherever I turn." "I just blew myself a new dress." He: "Do you always put them on that way?" Jeweler: "I don't like that new clerk you've hired." Manager: "Why not, sir?" "He takes things too easily."

Milkman: "It looks like rain." Customer: "Yes, it does, but it won't."

Notice To The Public

I hereby give notice that on the 17th day of October, 1927, at ten o'clock a. m., under authority of a Special Warrant from the Commissioner of the Land Office of the State of Maryland, I shall proceed to lay out and carefully survey for and in the name of Ruth E. Whitcomb, the quantity of one acre, more or less, of Vacant Land, situate, lying and being in the Fifth Election District of Kent County, State of Maryland, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the southern boundary of a patented tract of land called "Trumpington," and running in a southerly direction by and with Chesapeake Bay to a point of land called Wilsons Point and a cove called Long Cove, then with the western shore of Long Cove to the said southern boundary of the aforesaid "Trumpington"; it being the identical vacancy noted in an unpatented certificate resurveyed for Thomas Smyth called Resurvey on part of Trumpington, Smiths Meadows, etc., No. 179, Unpatented Certificate of Kent County, and never paid for.

GILBERT B. TAYLOR, Surveyor.

Saleman: "That, sir, is a suit you would never wear out." Customer: "No; not without being laughed at."

"When I proposed to Janet, she laughed at me." "She's a silly child. She laughs at the most stupid things."

"Better coal"—this is a very general statement—but, the many satisfied customers who come back proves that they are convinced our coal is "better coal." Try a ton—you'll be convinced too.

We heard yesterday of the young minister who was invited out to dine just before his evening sermon. He sat politely at the table but didn't eat. "I never eat before I deliver an address," he explained. After the address that evening, the host went up to him and said, "Well you might jest as well of it." Heard after the Tunney - Dempsey fight: "Hey, lend me a quarter, will ya?" "Say if it costs five cents for a trip around the world I couldn't get out of sight."

Ever hear this one? A negro preacher pestered his bishop so much with appeals for help that the bishop finally told him in no uncertain terms not to send any more appeals. The following week there came another letter, as follows: "This is not an appeal, this is a report. I have no pants."
