THE PRESIDENT'S STATEMENT

The announcement by President Calvin Coolidge yesterday, "I do not choose to run for President in 1928" started the country.

He has filled the office for four years with marked success and distinction. His exceptional popularity speaks volumes.

It can safely be assumed that the last thing in Mr. Coolidge's mind is a candidacy merely for the sake of candidacy.

But it may be that political and economic conditions make a continuation of Mr. Coolidge's Administration highly advisable.

What would the President or any other loyal American citizen do if such an imperative call came to him and it was necessary for him to choose between his personal inclinations and his obligations as a citizen?

We firmly believe that such a call will come and that Mr. Coolidge will respond to it.

NOW WE ASK YOU!

Too many noisy marriages, too many quiet divorces, says the Rev. Dr. Stetson, rector of New York's Trinity Church, that looks from Broadway down Wall Street to a convenient dock on the East River.

Dr. Stetson fears that we may imitate Soviet Russia, "where divorce is granted without question," and that our Government will some day make polygamy legal.

THINKING

Professor James Kennell, Dean of New York University, says scientists take too much for granted that strange substance, water, which we understand "as little as we understand oxygen 150 years ago."

Because of vast distances inside that drop, you would need a telescope. With it you could see inside of the atom, electrons revolving around a nucleus at the center of each atom TRILLIONS OF TIMES IN A SECOND.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our late friend and associate, M. A. Toulson; and WHEREAS, The intimate relations long held by our deceased friend with the members of this board render it proper that we should place on record our appreciation of his services as a Director of this company, and his merits as a man; therefore be it

Resolved, That in the death of M. A. Toulson, this company loses a Director who was always attentive and zealous in his work, prompt to advance the interests of the company, devoted to its welfare and prosperity; an honest and upright man, whose virtues endeared him not only to the members of this board, but to all of his fellow citizens.

Resolved, That this company tenders its heartfelt sympathy to the family and relatives of our deceased friend in their sad affliction.

The Lancer

Harry S. Russell

Sir Oliver Lodge, the big ghost and spook man from England, has expressed the belief that in the not far distant future we will be able to control the weather.

Sir Oliver, as you no doubt know, is a friend of spirits, good and bad. I, for one, am under the impression that the Englishman of science had just come from session with spirits of one sort or another when he made the above forecast.

Of course he may be right and, too, he may have seen all the spooks he says he has, but I haven't seen any spooks, and therefore don't take much stock in his weather report.

The thing is rather appalling, don't you know, when one considers the large difference of opinion that prevails when ever the weather is mentioned.

Such an accomplishment would be just another apple of discord to throw into the human arena. And what ever my ambitions politically, the job of weather dispenser would be one that couldn't under any circumstances be wished upon me.

Look upon, for instance, the fellows who today merely try to forecast the weather and the amount of abuse they must absorb. Then think of the fate of the fellow who had control of it.

And the more you go into this thing the more you hope that Sir Oliver is only a victim of too many spooks.

How would it be possible to provide suitable weather for everybody, even in such a small area as Kent County? How would the decision be made between two sets of people, one demanding rain and the other holding out for fair weather?

I can hear some of the corner politicians mumbling, "Let the majority rule." And if you did, let's cry of "favoritism," "discrimination" would be sent to every one from the President down to the editor of the country weekly. Heaven forbid.

You couldn't get anything like accord except in the time of a drought, and even then Tex Rickard would be having a prize fight in some outdoor spot and would growl for dry weather.

Take the case of the farmer: Even here there would be discord. One farmer might have a crop that needed rain and in the next field his neighbor might have one that was doing nicely. Imagine the man who sent weather to suit either of them. Trouble.

When one considers the difference of opinion there is about the weather this control business seems all wet. People simply wouldn't be satisfied with weather made to order.

As it is now, we have to take what we get. We can grumble and growl about the particular specimen that is our lot, but at the same time we know that to it we must resign ourselves.

Mistake me not, I am all for progress, but it may be more prudent for man to let nature take its course in this particular instance.

This is one time when I stand 'status quo.'

Rainy Day Notes. Two girls, in white, strolling along, unmindful of the falling rain. A group of negroes protected from the rain by a tree on the 'fish corner' of the public square. A white horse with a light limp. A small colored lad drawing an express wagon full of wash thru the rain. Is it 'wet wash'?

A Chestertown merchant who put his coop of ducks out in the gutter where water several inches thick, flows through. The ducks enjoying it greatly. A lady, with a newspaper as an umbrella, running for her car as a particularly hard shower comes down. All colors of the rainbow, plus, showing in the slickers, worn by young and old. Much paper, leaves, twigs, in fact a little of everything, floating riverward in the gutters. People walking close to buildings where the drip from cornices is worse than the rain.

Boy on a 'scooter car' with a mud guard, made from a paste board box, on his leg. Four crates of half-drowned chickens being loaded on a wagon. Plenty of water.

Resolved, That in the death of M. A. Toulson, this company loses a Director who was always attentive and zealous in his work, prompt to advance the interests of the company, devoted to its welfare and prosperity; an honest and upright man, whose virtues endeared him not only to the members of this board, but to all of his fellow citizens.

Resolved, That this company tenders its heartfelt sympathy to the family and relatives of our deceased friend in their sad affliction.

KIBLER'S CORNER

No. 18 Wednesday, August 3 Vol. 1

We know a man who is going to spend his vacation at home. "I've got some reading I want to do," he says, "and I've never found time to do it." Fine idea! And just think of the money he'll save.

Forty-eight per cent of the people buy their coal during the summer months and meet the winter with a smile of satisfaction in comfort, while fifty-two per cent take chances on the weather and the conditions it brings in the winter. Join the 48 per cent by ordering your winter's coal now at the reduced prices.

Nothing is so bad that it couldn't be worse; also nothing is so good that it couldn't be better. Take your choice.

I once had a bottle of rye. Most expensive that money could buy, I hired a feller To sweep out the cellar. (I once had a bottle of rye.)

A Chicago doctor says that cold weather makes the hair grow. Some of you bald readers might try sticking your head in the ice box.
