MILBOURN A. TOULSON

In the news columns of today's issue of The Enterprise is chronicled the passing of Milbourn A. Toulson, whose sudden death last Saturday evening shocked this community and filled the hearts of innumerable friends with deepest sorrow.

In very respect Milbourn A. Toulson was one of Chestertown's foremost and most praise-worthy citizens, one of God's noblemen, fashioned according to divine purpose, and an exemplar of righteousness and the highest type of Christian character.

A trustworthy friend, a devoted husband and father, an affable and pleasant personality at all times, his life was a benediction to all with whom he came in contact and his passing a distinct loss to the community.

Words are too cold and feeble to portray the sorrow his death occasions, too futile and inadequate to express the tender feelings of admiration and respect his life commanded.

A few weeks ago Chester Lodge, A. F. and A. M., held a special and unusual service in commemoration of Mr. Toulson's fifty years membership as a Master Mason.

The editor was privileged at that time to present a brief eulogy of the life and character of his fraternal brother, based upon a life time intimate acquaintance and association.

"And, as Masonry, consistently exemplified, and true manhood are synonymous, the words spoken on that occasion as a testimonial to Mr. Toulson's Masonic character apply with equal force and propriety to his life as a man unbound by lodge precepts and ritual restraints.

"Fifty years a Mason. What a rare experience. What a record to be proud of. Fifty years—a full half century of fraternal association, of social intercourse, of intimate companionship, of congenial communion with Brothers of the same blood, members of a Craft whose badge of Fellowship is more ancient than the Golden Fleece or Roman Eagle, more honorable than the Star and Garter, or any other order that can be conferred by King, Prince or Potentate.

"What a wealth of happy thought and peaceful satisfaction must come to our venerated and honored brother as he recalls the past and meditates upon the scenes and events of the days that are gone. What marvelous and enviable reminiscences are contained in the chamber of his memory. The joy and pleasures, and happiness known and experienced but by very few indeed in his day and generation.

"Perhaps too, the sorrows and disappointments, the trials and vexations of life that come to all, and which but serve to soften, refine and purify human nature and attune it in harmony with the grand symphony of creation—these are not wholly obliterated, but having borne with fortitude and submissive resignation in obedience to the will of the Supreme Architect of the Universe, are remembered now only as a part of His inscrutable plan of preparation for Membership in the Celestial Lodge above.

"Fifty years a Mason—the normal life time—yes, more than the average period of mortality after manhood's attainment, a steadfast, consistent, conscientious member of our Grand Old Fraternity—a Fraternity more exacting in its demands, more discriminating in its requirements than an similar institution of secular origin.

plumb-line of truth and moral rectitude, nor suffering his inclinations to transgress the boundary circle described by the compass of prudence and circumspection.

What a glorious heritage to bequeath to his immediate family, to his blood relations, to the community at large and to society in general.

"And what a splendid tribute and testimonial to the virtues and influence of Masonic traditions, Masonic teachings and Masonic practices.

"It does seem to me, and I say it with all due reverence, and without a single sacrilegious thought, that when the times comes for our good brother to lay aside for the last time the working tools of a Mason, and he knocks for admission into the Celestial Lodge above, where we all hope to meet in one grand communication enduring throughout all eternity, and the Junior Deacon announces, Brother M. A. Toulson, life member of Chester Lodge, that the only command and order that can come from the Supreme Grand Master who rules the world and all the worlds, must be—Admit him."

Being vacation time it is the best period of the year to write about the colleges and the college boys. College boys have been an institution in the United States for years.

My reason for choosing this time of the year for writing of the college is simple. Being the "rest" period of the year there will be none to refute my statements unless some of the summer school addicts take time off from their love-making and card-playing.

Much has been written and more said during the past few years about the present day game of college football being a pink-tea-party when compared to the knock-em-down, drag-em-out contests of old.

The present day slaughter is far from being a pink tea, but on the other hand, we must admit, those of us who can't remember that far back, that if the chronicles of the pre-war sport are true, they were surely a gang of cut-throats as compared to the gridders of today.

"When the roughness and slugging had reached a point where it became an unpleasant feature of the game the prosecuting attorney of the city of Chicago rushed onto the field, halted the affair and reminded the players that the Tippecanoe Grand Jury was in session, and that if the game did not become a lot more refined he would find it necessary to go before the Grand Jury and ask for indictments on the grounds of assault and battery."

It further relates that "the players quieted down thereafter, but the spectators began to find fault with the rulings of the officials, and they kept running onto the field for the purpose of avenging themselves upon those officials.

Still with the great national university word comes that Haverford, a college whose football teams always, for some unknown reason, were gray for Washington College, is going to equip their gridders this fall in the college colors. Haverford has much the same color scheme that has the local institution. The report is that the Haverford pigskin chasers will wear black pants, with scarlet pads, black jerseys with a wide scarlet band and stocking of the same scheme.

This is really an innovation. If such had happened in the olden days we could have explained it by saying that the college players wanted to die with their colors on. But in the present day, basket-penic stage of the game, it is hard to fathom.

Imagine some team whose colors are cream and light blue, trying out the stant. Pink tie, Aye.

One business or profession that depends almost wholly upon the colleges for its supply of raw material is that of the Jazz Orchestra. For some reason, more than likely that the collegian are of the so called Jazz Age, they make the best men for the Jazz groups.

This is particularly true of what is called the "hot-break" artist. A "hot-break" artist is one who adds in a few notes of his own in any break of the music. When there comes a pause this artist put in a few fancy touches, maybe the air of an old song, and then when the rest of the orchestra picks up, goes right along with them. 'Tis said that the colleges furnish most of this group.

Paul Whiteman, has three colleagues taking the breaks for him. None of this trio use their instruments in the break. All use their throats. They give forth weird sounds and combinations of notes. One, the pianist, bangs the top of his piano as a beat in the break; another stamps the floor, smacks the soles of his shoes with his hands; the third adds a beat now and then upon the drum.

So you see instead of becoming bond salesmen, ball players and clerking in Dad's store, the college graduate of today goes in for "hot-breaks."

HELP YOURSELF TO HEALTH

The adage that "God helps those that help themselves" is never so true as in the matter of health. In hundreds of ways the health of every individual depends upon himself, and particularly in this so in the matter of keeping the spine straight.

Unless the spine is in proper alignment, there will be pressure upon the delicate nerves branching off from it, and some organ of the body will suffer for lack of vital force. When such pressure occurs it can only be corrected by Spinal Adjustments.

By My Chiropractic Health Service I correct Conditions of the Head, Throat, Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, Bowels and Lower Organs.

We're told that lots of girls smoke cigarettes. But what if they chewed tobacco?

There is one thing we can say in favor of a dog fight. The dogs don't go around town afterwards talking for publication.

It was a small backwoods village. A motorist stopped at a shack and asked the way to the next village. A lanky youth ambled to the door.

"Boy," asked the tourist. "How far is it to Hickman?" "Waal," drawled the youth. "I don't rightly know. But I'll call Jed. Jed's traveled all over. He's got shoes."

"I had my nose broken in three places last summer." "Well, you should stay out of those kind of places."
