FRIENDLY COMMUNITIES
Communities that do not have large signs welcoming strangers within their gates are usually looked upon as out of date, but it takes more than signs to make a community friendly.

The automobile tourists have frequently been misled by signs. They have gone into communities with the expectation of finding a hearty welcome and a willingness on the part of everyone to make their stay as pleasant as possible.

Even more beneficial to a community than a well fitted tourist camp, is a friendly towards strangers passing through while in an automobile trip.

A modern tourist camp is essential if the average community wishes to attract any tourists—and visitors of this class are fast growing in number—but the thing that lingers longest in the memory of a tourist is the kindly reception from the people with whom he came in contact.

A tourist recently informed us that the incident that he remembers best about a long motor trip he took, was the courtesy of a policeman in one city through which he passed. The policeman recognized him as a stranger and piloted him through the city so that he could avoid the heavy traffic and a torn-up street and thus escape vexing delay.

But the responsibility can't all be placed on the shoulders of the officers of the law, nor upon the officials of civic organizations. It is a responsibility of citizenship and a sign of home loyalty to be courteous to strangers and give them a friendly welcome.

The touring season is here and hundreds of motorists will be passing through this summer. Many of them will stop here if they get the right sort of reception. More of them will be our guests and will patronize our places of business if we show that we want to be hospitable.

There is only one way to be friendly, and that is to loosen up and act human when a stranger asks for information.

Signs extending a welcome to strangers are the most expensive things a community can have if the welcome is not manifest when the stranger gets a cold shoulder at every turn.

CARE AT CROSSINGS
Large increases in automobile accidents at railroad crossings are shown in a summary of reports of all large railroad lines.

Such mishaps last year numbered well over 3,000, and fatalities totaled 1292 compared with 1154 the year previous. This compilation did not include the short line or interurban, so that the sacrifice of life to carelessness was really much larger than these figures indicate.

Many drivers of automobiles make the mistake of depending upon the crossing flagman. They forget that watchmen are only human and are subject to all the human weaknesses. An inspection of the Long Island railroad in New York recently disclosed eighteen grade crossing watchmen asleep, out of eighty-five crossings visited during the inspection.

Millington Fire Company
Opens Annual Carnival

Millington's annual carnival for the benefit of the Community Fire Company got off to a rousing start Saturday, when big crowds attended. Officials of the Community company have arranged one of the most elaborate programs in the history of the annual functions and numerous new features will be introduced during the eight-day festival.

Monday evening the celebration was in the nature of a great Fourth of July demonstration, when there were an elaborate display of fireworks and other features. The chief event of the week will be the firemen's parade on Wednesday evening, when fire companies with their bands of music from many Del-Mar-Va towns will compete for prizes.

CHRIST FOR ALL—ALL FOR CHRIST
The Word of God

ALL NEEDS SUPPLIED—The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever. Psalm 23:1-6.

PRAYER—O Lord, do Thou satisfy us early with Thy mercy, that we may rejoice and be glad all our days.

What does Paul call the temple of God, and if we defile this temple, what is the result? Answer: read—1 Cor. 3:16, 17.

The Lancer

Harry S. Russell

"How do you get that way?" writes V. M. Every week I read that "Lancing" column of yours. One week you say one thing and the next you contradict it. For a decade, nearly, I have known you and your every habit.

"You are one who sleeps late, always accepts engagements and sometimes keep them. You are always going some place and never go. I know how long you were in college, and why. I remember the only time you were a hero, and how. I knew your dogs, danced with your girls and have heard your ideas about God and prohibition. I know your favorite dishes and how you play cards. I repeat, 'How do you get that way?'"

Now that I am revealed, naked, before the world, may I say a word in my own defense. Much of what V. M. says is true and much of it is regrettable. Long evenings we have spent beneath the stars and lounging in smoke filled rooms and no doubt he knows me. But V. M. has never tried to fill a column, especially in a small town, where so much happens and so little can be published. And, to him, and others who know me, I confess, at times when available subjects were slack, I have expressed views with which I did not wholly agree, just because they filled the column.

I am afraid it was a mistake. The life of a columnist is a hard one. In order to keep the game going I should have committed a murder, married a "Peaches" or inherited a million. Only the first of these appeals to me and had I killed the gentleman I have in mind, I would never have been suspected. The States Attorney would have investigated as any one of a thousand persons might have committed the murder and been justified.

This, then, friends and gentle readers, shall be my plan. I shall create a fictitious Harry S. Russell. He shall have none of the good or bad habits which are mine own. His ideas will not be mine and any opinion expressed by him cannot be brought to me. I shall speak about him freely and this columnist of my creation shall be a devil of a fellow. He shall say everything before him. Nothing shall be held back.

Before reading into this next paragraph remember that henceforth and forever hereafter, this is not me writing but a fictitious gentleman masquerading under my name.

Nell, and I mean "Nell O" the Fryer Pan," in the words of my critical friend, "How do you get that way?" Imagine calling my uncle's dog a pointer, when every one but you, knows he is a setter. You may know your onions, as one connected with a frying pan should, but you don't know your dogs. For your enlightenment I will tell you how to distinguish between the two. A pointer, points. A setter, sets or sits, have it as you will. Haven't you seen "Bob" sitting around a lot. Of course that night in the movies he pointed his nose down the aisle and then pointed it back, but that is hardly an excuse for mistaking him for a pointer. And I might add that "Bob" is highly incensed over the remark and has threatened to bite you if you ever cross his path. I think a court would uphold him, for it was slander and nothing else.

That most persons are honest I still believe. But statistics show that in a seven-handed poker game, if each player is supposed to ante and somebody discovers there are eight antes, at least four of the seven will say, "I think I anted twice."
