DREXEL WINS WEIRD GAME

Washington College and Drexel engaged in the weirdest exhibition of base ball ever seen on the local diamond last Saturday and Drexel went back to Philadelphia with the largest end of a 9 to 8 score.

Everything that should or shouldn't be done in a ball game was indulged in in this afternoon of the great American pastime.

It was a weird game, weird from start to finish. It started being weird in the first inning and got worse as the innings past.

Washington had little difficulty with the Drexelites in their first turn at bat, retiring them in order.

Dumschott, first up for the Kibbles, singled. Dopson sacrificed and was safe on an overthrow, Dumschott going to third. Dumschott then beat the throw to the plate on Cavanaugh's hit to short. Smoot stroled filling the bases. Mandrell tapped one down the first base line and was safe on a wild throw. Dopson and Cavanaugh crossing the plate on the same play. Colasanto and Burke fanned the air for a pair of strike outs and Mandrell scored on Wright's infield hit. Bennett fled out, retiring the side with five runs. Nine men had been at bat.

As the second inning began Washington again sent the Drexel nine back to the field after but three men had stepped to the pan.

In the second portion of the inning, Calhoun, right fielder for Drexel, caught three fly balls to retire, personally, the Washington side.

In the third inning again but three men faced Bennett. Smoot saved the day with a spectacular catch of Dean's hard drive to deep left.

And it was Smoot who singled to lead off Washington's half, stole second and came home in a wild throw and an error by the centre fielder.

The Drexel half of the fourth was the same old story; three men up, three men down. Dopson, found it necessary to out do Smoot in spectacularness, by making a running, back hand catch to retire the side.

Then again in the fifth Bennett was lucky. He passed the first two men to bat. The side was then retired, one of the outs being the picking off of first of one of those whom had walked, Dumschott to Cavanaugh. Just sixteen men, one over the minimum, had battled against Bennett in five innings.

Then the weirdness began to reappear. In the sixth, Bennett again walked the first two hitters. The third was safe on Cavanaugh's error. Then with the stage all set, the hero, alias Calhoun, strode on. He twanged the first pitched ball for a triple scoring the three men on the paths and counted a second later on an infield out.

In the seventh Bennett again walked two and then was replaced by Purcell. One run scored before three men were out.

In the eighth Drexel rushed three runners across to get into the lead for the first time at 8 to 7.

Washington countered in their half of the eighth and tied the score at eight all.

In the ninth, with the first two Drexel men up getting on things looked bad for Washington. But when the next pair hitters were sent back easily, things looked brighter. And brighter still they looked when the third man hit a hot grounder to Cavanaugh who knocked it down with ease. Then clouds appeared, and things looked black for Cavanaugh after stopping the ball couldn't pick it up and the runner was safe as what proved to be the winning tally crossed the pan.

In the final half Washington made a noble attempt to even the count but failed.

Weird. It was worse than that. With a seven run lead and his team playing perfect ball behind him, Bennett decided to become temperamental and was taken with a pass attack of "walkites." After he had gone to the showers and Purcell had taken his bow, the Washington team began to play sloppily against almost perfect pitching.

It was a hard game to lose but a team that played like Washington played deserved just such a fate.

Sharkey Knocks At Tunney's Door He's A Rough, Tough, Fighting Man

Occasionally there shoots across the pugilistic skies a colorful fighter who crashes his way to the top—and in this day and age collects many striking sheekles as he goes. They do not appear often, but when they do they hold the attention of the fans though the sheer spectacular of their style. Usually each of these new stars is but, in a manner, the counterpart of some great ringman who has gone before.

Dempsey reminded of Jefferies; Tunney reminds of Corbett, etc., etc. The new star now knocking at the champions door is Jack Sharkey of Boston, who at this writing looms a worthy opponent of champion Gene Tunney.

Jack Sharkey is more or less of a newcomer to the rank and file of ring fans throughout the country. They know, generally, that he has suddenly appeared on the scene—with the prostrate forms of the giant Harry Wills and Jim Maloney stretched prone upon the canvass behind him. He battered his way past their defense and is now knocking at Tunney's door, and—in so doing he displayed a fighting form which caused old timers to gasp—and see in him the counter-part of a heavyweight who in his day was as colorful as any would care to look upon.

Jack Sharkey is "Fireman" Jim Flynn all over again. Those who ever saw the Pueblo heavyweight in action will recall a ferocious fighting man that thought tough, talked tough and fought tough.

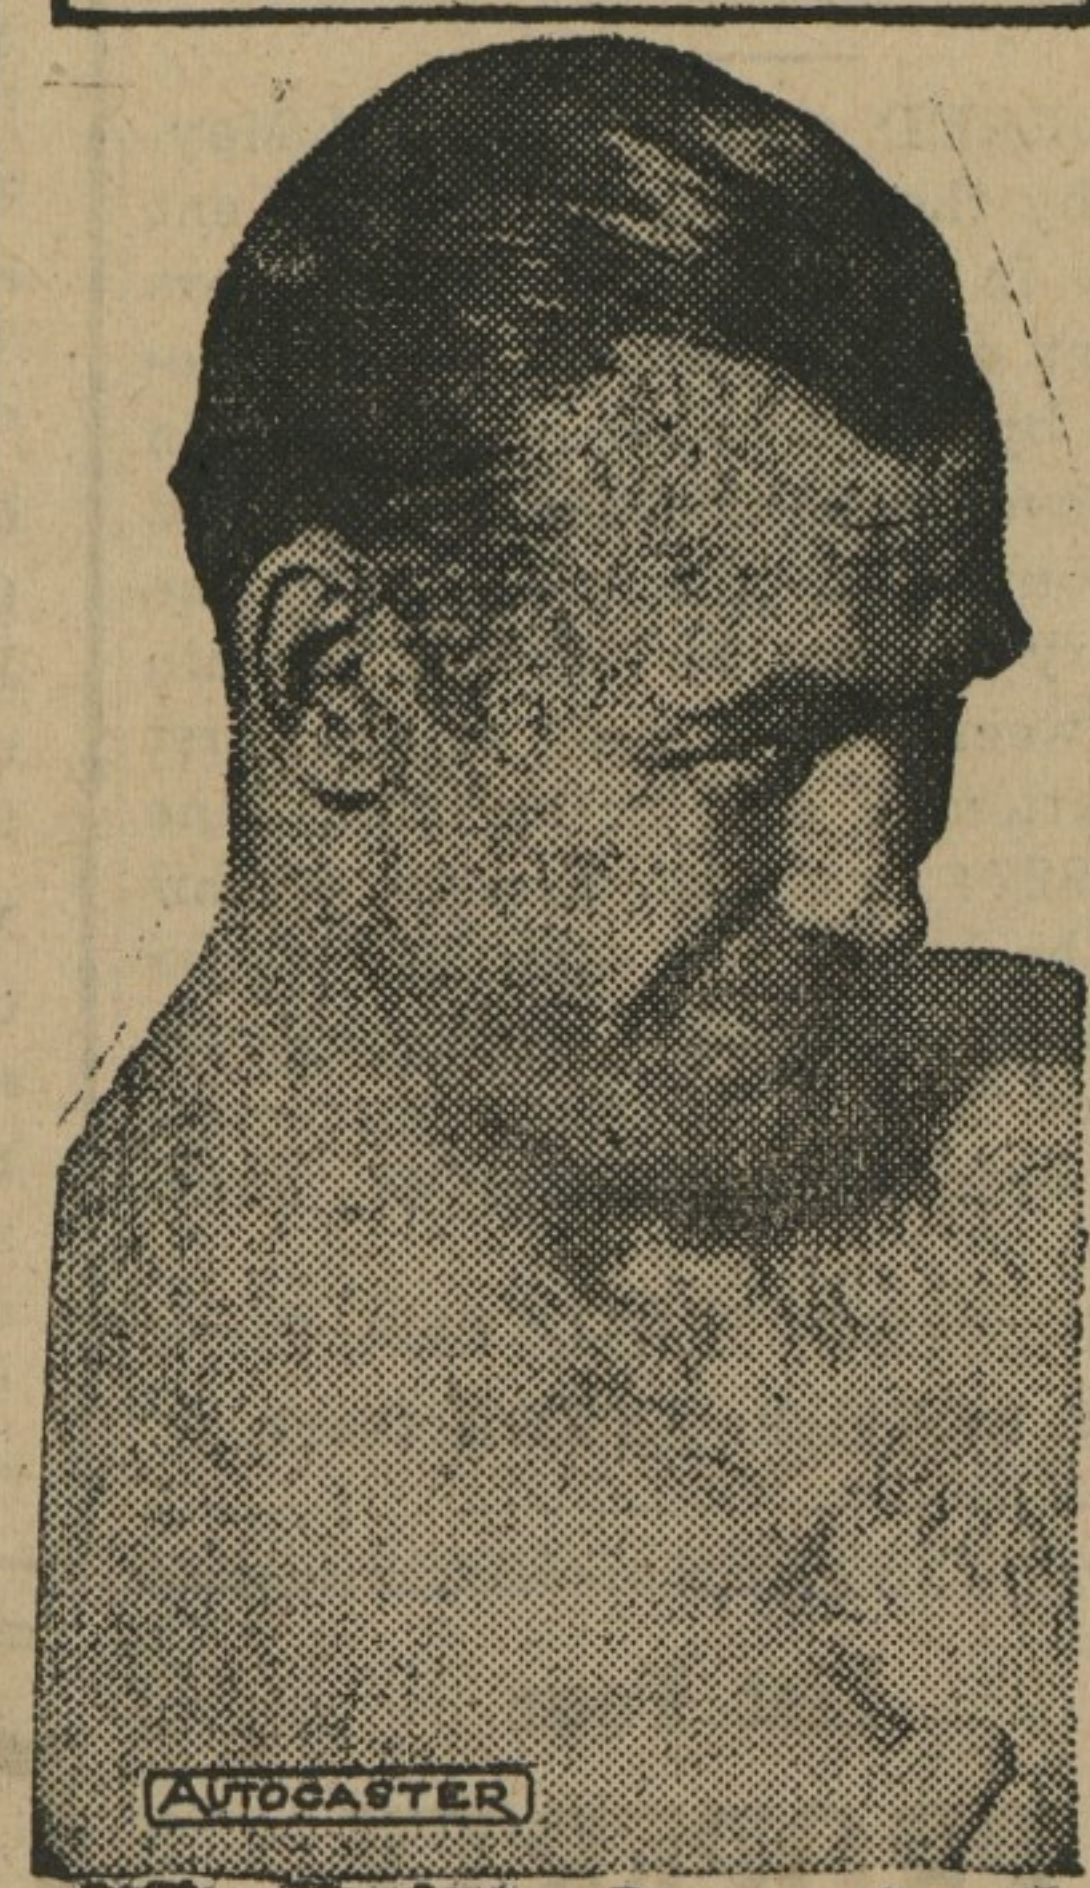

In a Kansas City ring years ago Flynn fought Al Kauffman of San Francisco, in a battle that will never be forgotten by those who witnessed it. It was in the days of "white hope" elimination to find an opponent for Jack Johnson. It was a desperate battle with Kauffman picked to win.

By the end of the sixth round the tall Kauffman was a battered mess. Flynn was fighting with the viciousness of a wild beast. He finally dropped Kauffman in the fifth—and seventh, to stay. Then was witnessed a scene that virtually froze the fans in their seats. With Danny Shea tolling off the count over the sense-tottering California on the floor seven times—the last time, in the next two rounds had the less Kauffman—Flynn did an Indian war-dance around the two—yelling in glee at the top of his voice until the count was finished.

Jack Sharkey displayed a viciousness in his five round knockout of Jim Maloney last week—which was Flynn all over again. There are those today who say Dempsey—and Tunney—may as well consider the facts—before climbing through the ropes with the new Boston strongboy, Sharkey.

WASHINGTON TAKES FINAL FROM LOYOLA

Carroll's Hitting Featured Contest With Brace Of Homers

Jack Carroll and his "good left hand, aided by a husky pair of shoulders enabled Washington College to defeat Loyola in the second meeting of the two schools last Thursday 6 to 5.

Carroll pitched fine ball but his hitting proved the winning factor for the Kibbles. In four official appearances at the plate he slammed out a brace of homers and a double. His second circuit came in the ninth inning with a man on base and provided the winning margin.

"Reds" Wright hit the ball a la Carroll for one round trip and also punched out a single. Mandrell furnished a triple and a single in four times at bat.

Roger Smoot stole the only base of the engagement.

The Washington victory put a crimp in the claims of Loyola for the State title. The Jesuits had been undefeated by a state team before this contest. At present the championship honors are well sewed up with both Loyola and Washington figuring well up in the race.

Carroll pitched his usual steady game, issuing only two passes, rather remarkable for a southpaw.

Washington and Drexel went in for farce baseball last Saturday and at least gave the small crowd of spectators lots of fun.

Bennett and his Washington supporters allowed just twelve Drexel men to appear at bat in the first four innings.

Sports writers were thinking up just how they would write the story of the perfect game.

Bennett sort of knocked this in the head by walking a couple in the fifth but then they thought he might still pitch a no-hit, no-run affair.

Dumschott, Washington's catcher, lost the ball under his chest protector.

No runs scored because they thought Dutch was trying to bait them on.

Purcell, who finished the game for the Kibbles, brought joy to the heart of football coach Brown by the way he took the Drexel catcher out in the ninth.

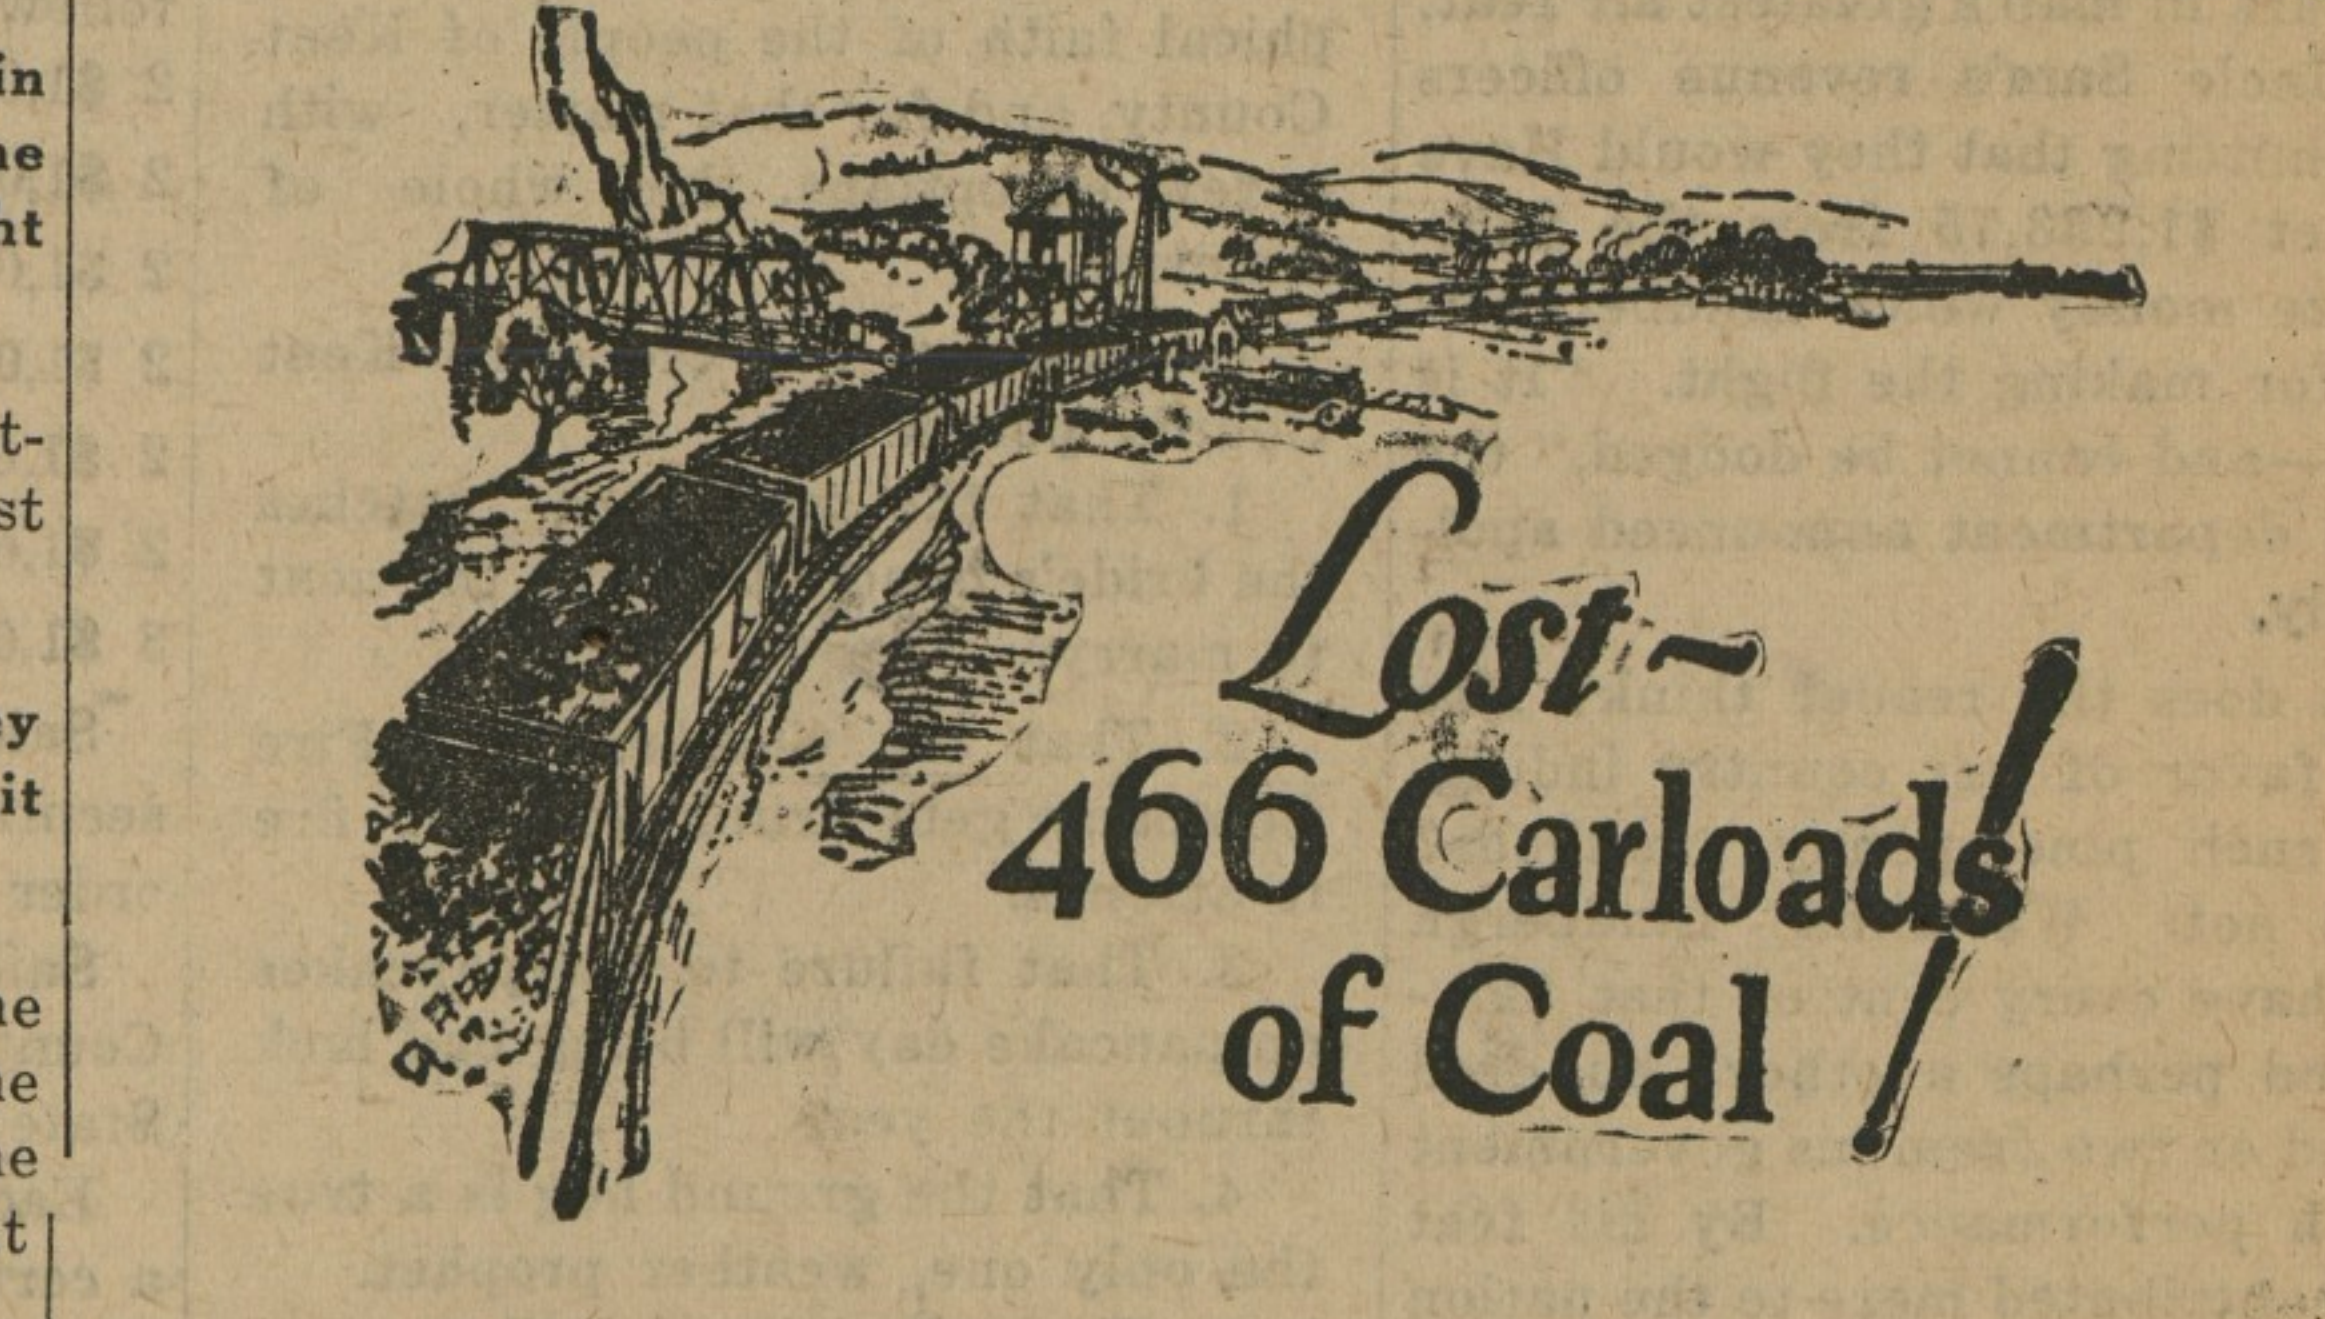

After it was over the Drexel nine had a fight about who was to keep

Lost—466 Carloads of Coal

A COAL COMPANY recently learned that two firms in Milwaukee were in the market for a large tonnage. Instantly it dispatched one of its best men to the Wisconsin city, equipped with favorable prices and terms.

But while their representative sped westward in a fast train, a competitor in Charleston, W. Va., learned of the situation. Immediately he called the two Milwaukee firms by long distance telephone and sold 466 carloads of coal. When the salesman for the first concern arrived the order was lost.

The long distance telephone has become the right-hand man of modern business. In tracing shipments, in checking overdue accounts, in building better customer relations, and in direct selling, the magic of voice-to-voice communication is showing direct results on the business balance sheet.
