Spring Work That Will Help The Lawn

Seasonal care is the price of a good lawn and attention to a few details in spring, like the proverbial stitch in time, will likely save more work later in the year when it is sure to be less effective, explains W. R. Ballard, specialist in vegetable and landscape gardening for the University of Maryland Extension Service.

"While fall seeding of lawn grasses is usually advisable in most sections of Maryland, it is often advantageous to scatter a little seed over thin spots in early spring," says Mr. Ballard. "Rolling the lawn after freezing weather has passed is also a good thing to do as the roots will be forced into close contact with the soil again after winter heaving."

"Stable manure is often used as a top dressing for lawns but is likely to introduce undesirable weed seeds. It is less troublesome in this respect if thoroughly rotted. Bone meal, pulverized sheep manure and chemical fertilizers can be used to advantage. To be most effective top dressing should be done early in the spring."

"Specific directions for the use of fertilizers cannot be given, owing to the wide variation in soil conditions. Finely ground bone meal, however, can be used safely in amounts of from fifteen to twenty pounds per thousand square feet. It is best applied in the late winter or very early spring. Nitrate of soda is best applied in small doses. From three to five pounds per thousand square feet is sufficient for one application. It is preferably mixed with sand before being applied. A normal application of sulphate of ammonia would be from eight to ten pounds per thousand square feet."

Cat to King

Last July an oil field wild-catter, today worth $10,000,000 and an Oil King, such is the story of Robert F. Garland, 38 years old, native of Ohio, who brought in "Discovery Well," first of the Seminole (Okla.) field which is already producing 10 per cent of the total output of crude oil in the United States, according to oil journals.

Joe: "Bill, I won't have it! For the last time, I ask you, will you keep away from my girl?"

Bill: "Thank the Lord, that's the last time I'll ever hear that question."

Pigs You Buy May Bring Hog Cholera

Young pigs should be purchased with the utmost care this spring, says Dr. I. K. Atherton, inspector in charge of hog cholera control in Maryland, to avoid the possibility of introducing hog cholera through this means.

"Every year it is possible to trace outbreaks of cholera to swine which have been purchased by unsuspecting farmers from unknown sources," says Dr. Atherton. "The danger this spring will be greater than usual because of the prevalence of the disease last fall and because of the probable greater demand for young pigs this spring."

"Just as an ordinary matter of precaution it is advisable to deal only with people who are known and whose reputation it is safe to rely. There is no exception to this rule in the case of livestock though it frequently seems to be true that people who are cautious enough in other matters think little of the chances they take in buying swine from unknown people and unknown sources."

"Last year seventeen outbreaks of hog cholera were traced to animals sold by a single dealer. Unfortunately in cases of this kind the losses are not always confined to the animals purchased or even to the individuals making the purchases. The possibility of spreading the disease once it is introduced is always the serious factor to be considered. The safest course in all cases is to guard against every possible source of infection."
