Looking Into The Mind Of Man

Dear Miss Flo:

Do you think it is good policy for a wife to let her husband see how much she loves him, and how necessary he is to her happiness, or is it better for her to appear indifferent? When a man knows for a certainty that a woman's heart is his, he is likely to undervalue it?

I have only been married a short time, and I am anxious to keep my husband's love. Please advise me.

A man's attitude toward love undergoes a radical change on his wedding day.

We all know that before marriage the more difficult a woman is to win the more the man promises her, and the more a woman is to win the more the man pursues her, and the more a woman throws herself, at a man the more ardently he dodges her.

During the period of courtship the thing that is of more importance to him than anything else in the world is the state of mind of the girl he loves. It's a wonderful, sentimental adventure, and he follows all her moods. When she is coy and difficult it arouses all his sporting instinct, and when he succeeds in taking her away from his rivals, and she finally surrenders to him, he is thrilled, with a sense of being a conquering, irresistible hero.

But marriage is a different story altogether. A man expects the capture to end the chase, and he doesn't want to have it run on the balance of his life. He expects marriage to finish all doubts, fears, heart aches and speculations about the woman he loves, so that he will be free to give his undivided attention to his work.

For that reason, the tactics that won a woman a husband will not serve to hold him, and the wife who tries to pique her husband's interest in her by her indifference is more apt to land in the divorce court than to strengthen her position in the man's heart.

For men do not want to be kept guessing about their wives. They want to be sure of them. The man who is married to a woman who keeps him in constant doubt of her affection, and keeps him on the verge of a nervous breakdown with jealousies and doubts and suspicions does not think he has drawn much of a prize in the matrimonial gamble. On the contrary, he is likely to think that he has been taken in and he isn't crazy about having been so badly mistaken in his judgment.

The wise woman never hesitates to let her husband know how much she loves him, how necessary he is to her happiness, because her love makes the strongest claim she can possibly have upon him. Many a man who has made an unsuitable marriage with a woman with whom he had no real companionship, and many a man who has outgrown the woman he married in his youth, is kept faithful to her by the knowledge of her devotion to him, for few husbands are heartless enough to hurt a wife who worships him or leave the woman whose whole life is bound up in him.

Nor is there any allure of mind or person that appeals to a man so much as just the certainty of a wife's love and the knowledge that if all the world turned against him, she would still remain loyal and true.

Dr. Frank Crane Says

No Compromise With Liquor

The liquor business is like a deadly serpent. It is about as easy to regulate or to make legal as it is to tame a hyena.

It is essentially a wild beast. It is unfortunately allied with conviviality. Many people seem to think that getting drunk is a joke and the consumption of alcohol is amusing. They speak condescendingly of the use of whiskey by the youth.

Many people, and especially those engaged in wet propaganda, do not realize the deadly end of this peril. It is an own brother to murder, hold-ups, burglary, smuggling and thuggism.

A man engaged in the business of enforcing the law of prohibition takes his life in his hands, for those in the liquor business do not hesitate to kill when it is necessary. It embraces not only low brow thugs, but millionaires and social leaders.

While the common people have declared for the abolition of alcohol there are many who are determined to go on with their consumption of liquor.

The efforts of the convivially inclined and those who think that their personal liberty has been interfered with are influenced by one of the strongest passions in the human breast greed.

It is difficult to enforce any law when the breaking of that law is backed up by human passions. The laws against arson, murder, adultery and theft are thousands of years old yet they are constantly violated no matter what their evil effects.

The law against the use of liquor is aimed at the greatest curse and greatest cause of crime that humanity has ever known.

Those who see the villainess of its effects, the moral degradation of youth and the damage to business, have lined up solidly for prohibition, while against the prohibitory law are those who are subtly influenced by the traditional tolerance of the human race to a habit that is supposed to be genial and pardonable. The trouble with bootlegging is that it pays and pays big. Whoever will take the profit out of this unholy business will be doing a great service.
