

Dr. Frank Crane Says

Your Knowledge Has Power

Knowledge is power—sometimes. It is power only when it is practical knowledge. The mere acquisition of facts and information may make a man informed, but unless those facts apply to what he undertakes they do not increase his power. You may learn all the intimate facts about all the Kings of England without helping you appreciably in the cement business. It may make it easier to live with yourself, but it will not increase your power.

Barrie has a play about a yacht full of educated people which goes aground upon an uninhabited island. The only man who knows what to do is the uneducated butler. He builds a shelter and hunts for food while the others stand helpless. What little education he had was of a practical sort that applied to the needs of the moment.

He had power because his knowledge applied there. In a drawing-room conversation the others would have had power because their knowledge fitted the needs of that situation.

Those who speak of the failure of education make the mistake of thinking that power is the only end of knowledge.

Knowledge is of three kinds. There is knowledge that gives power; knowledge that gives culture; knowledge that gives wisdom.

Knowledge is like the food we take into our systems. Part of this food goes to make flesh, part to make blood and part goes to make the structure of the bones. So only a part of knowledge goes to make power. Some men without any broad education attain positions of great eminence because the narrow range of their information is all practical and applicable to their work.

Another part of knowledge feeds culture. It gives interests and ideas and appreciations that make men's lives more enjoyable and full.

And another part of knowledge gives wisdom. It builds self-control and understanding. A man may be powerful like Alexander the Great, or cultured like Oscar Wilde, and know not the meaning of wisdom.

And as Durant, using the popular adage loosely, says: "Knowledge is power, but only wisdom is liberty."

Daughter Who Tells Mother All Is Not Bad

Dear Miss Flo:

Among my acquaintances is a woman who has a pretty little flapper daughter of seventeen. The girl is all that is good and wholesome, and is as innocent and as full of fun as a kitten. But she sobs her hair, paints her face, roughs her lips, dances, joyrides, and all in all goes a pace that must prove demoralizing in the end. When I criticize my friend for permitting her daughter to do these things, she just shrugs her shoulders and says, "What can I do about it? All the other girls make up and act that, and I can't make her different from the others and spoil her fun."

I think she actually encourages her daughter's wildness, because the daughter tells her everything without fear of being scolded. Don't you think the mother is wrong?

The majority of mothers are anything but pleased with the pace their daughters are going—but it isn't easy to bring up the modern young girl with simple, well-bred standards or by the standards of past generations.

Youth will be served! Look a girl in her room and she will probably climb out of the window. Forbid her to have boys call on her at home, and she will meet them outside. Refuse to let her go to club dances, and she will slip away to low dance places. Invariably, the wildest and most reckless girls are those with parents who are too strict.

Every intelligent woman knows that it is a mistake for a young girl to make up and to wear clothes that attract attention. As a matter of plain common sense and knowledge of the world they know that a young girl handicaps herself by these methods. She takes away her chief charm—her youth and freshness. By plastering her lovely youthful complexion with rouge and powder, the young girl puts herself on the level with the older woman who may need these adjuncts, and when she destroys the greatest advantage she has, how can she compete with the older woman who has the knowledge and poise that the younger girl lacks?

Undoubtedly, all mothers know this—but they must also realize that the young people of today are living in the world of today and will do as they do today. Because a girl bobs her hair, paints her face, roughs her lips, dances and joyrides—because she is young, pleasure-loving and irresponsible, is no reason for prophesying dismal things about her. It is a passing phase of life, and she will get over it if she is given a little time and a little understanding. On the other hand, the power of suggestion is strong, and the results may be disastrous if you make the girl think she is reckless and wild, and bound to come to some bad end.

So the wise mother tries to develop a sense of humor, and cultivate the spirit of youth in her own heart, that she may have more tolerance, understanding and sympathy with her daughter's seeming reckless spirit. She makes an effort to become her daughter's confidante, as your friend has done, that she may keep close enough to her to know what she is doing and to keep her sense of proportion from becoming distorted. Lucky is the mother whose daughter tells her everything without fear of being punished and scolded, for it is the understanding mother who can sympathize with her daughter's desire for good times and help her to get them who gets well enough acquainted with her daughter to help her and protect her.

Blondé Wins Again

Beauty

St. Paul, Minn., seems partial to Miss Pearl Cramer, twice within a year electing her the city's "most beautiful" this time to represent her town in Galveston, Tex., spring beauty contest. She's a blonde.

Harold MacGrath

From the pen of Harold MacGrath, famous American author, comes "Bound to the North," a new serial story which this paper will publish exclusively in this territory, starting soon. There is adventure, romance and thrills—in the story of a courageous and winsome Virginia maiden, who, when father and brothers are killed, carries on in war. Don't miss a single chapter.

TEST 'O' TEN

HOW SMART ARE YOU?

Facts are elusive, and information which we think we have at our finger tips often eludes us. It's great fun digging into the recesses of our minds for those hidden bits of knowledge. That's why every body is playing this question and answer game. What do you know? How do your friends know? How do your scores compare? Will you know, a few weeks from now, why they're repeated, those questions on which you fail the first time? Score yourself 10 points on each question.

TEST 'O' TEN QUESTIONS

1. Who was Virginia Dare?
2. Are there any states that will not grant a divorce for any cause whatsoever? Name them.
3. What city is known as "The City of Brotherly Love?"
4. Who wrote "The Raven"?
5. Who said, "What this country needs is a good 5-cent cigar?"
6. Who wrote "The Green Hat?"
7. Which dance became popular first, the Black Bottom or the Charleston?
8. In England, what is a "Bobby?"
9. Where is the Statue of Liberty located?
10. Who is generally credited with having started the bobbed hair fad in America?

The correct answers will be published next week.

ANYWHERE TO ANYWHERE—BY TELEPHONE

"Oh, Dad, it's wonderful to hear your voice! I get so lonesome and homesick. Why don't you call me often?"

We Ought to Do This Often

WITH long distance telephone service at your elbow, there is no longer such a thing as separation. The calls are cheap—especially station-to-station calls—and the service is rapid. A station-to-station call for a distance of 150 miles costs only 95c. during the day; between 7.00 and 8.30 p. m. the call costs 70c.; between 8.30 p. m. and 4.30 a. m., 50c. And you can reach almost any place in just a few minutes!

Many improvements in long distance service have been made during the past year. Rates have been generally reduced and the service has been speeded up. Another thing, station-to-station calls (above 20 cents) may now be reversed without extra charge

A Tire Chain that protects your Tires

The Goodyear Rubber Non-Skid Chain PROTECTS YOUR TIRES as well as you and your car.

The flat cross links of rubber fit the tire snugly and prevent a great deal of the wear that tread and sidewalls normally get—especially curb and rut wear. Being of rubber the links cannot dig into your tire.

This Goodyear Chain wears far longer than ordinary chains and gives maximum protection against dangerous side-skid because of its unique construction.
