MRS. COOLIDGE, COMMON SENSE CHILDREN AND CANARY BIRDS POLITE GOV. MOODY REAL FLYING AUGUST 1

Mrs. Coolidge in South Dakota, sees women of all kinds, young girls and grandmothers, wearing knickerbockers. Mrs. Coolidge respects them and probably admires their common sense, but she will not wear knickerbockers. Rubber boots when she goes fishing and a skirt of reasonable length—never mind if it gets wet.

Two hundred and seven Americans reported incomes of $1,000,000 a year or more in 1925.

In 1924 only seventy-five reported incomes of a million dollars or over.

Once a man owning a million was a wonder. Now 207 have a million or more INCOME and some have fifty millions of income and a good deal more through corporation ownership.

And the billion a year income will arrive before earth's phase of industrial feudalism shall pass.

Mrs. Freeman, the unhappy mother whose husband was killed by an automobile, killed herself and her five children when told they must go to an orphan asylum. "Better dead than without a mother," said the poor woman, and went with them.

She was careful to protect two canary birds, putting them where the deadly gas could not reach them. She knew that canary birds have a value; somebody would buy them and treat them kindly. She knew that children have no value; that she could not be sure that strangers in an asylum would treat them kindly.

Visiting New York City with a party of distinguished Texans, welcomed and looked up to, literally and in other ways, Governor Moody listens and thinks.

He hears that New York City is the biggest American factory town, turning out five and a half billion dollars worth of products a year. Governor Moody is too polite to mention the fact that any State he has seen on his way East, including New York, could be tucked away in Texas and not attract much attention. Texas alone, intensively cultivated, could feed every one of the 1,900,000,000 human beings on earth and have room left to raise cotton.

While Byrd was flying east across the Atlantic, and two young Army men went across the Pacific, at 110 miles an hour, our interesting visitor, the comet Pons-Winnecke, was leaving the earth behind, passing through various constellations at the rate of 66,500 miles an hour.

Shall we, tiny creatures, when released from service on this earth, make some such journey? That would be more interesting than going into the ground to stay there.

The VERY DRYS plan a dry ticket in 1928, if neither party supplies them with a candidate dry enough.

It would be enlightening to nominate at least one independent dry. The result would be instructive. Few candidate dare defy the dry, few would want an out and out dry nomination.

At this moment of flying enthusiasm, one word of caution is necessary, and expert flyers remind you of it.

Don't go up "just to know how it feels" unless you know the pilot and the machine.

There are unsafe machines, plenty of them, including many bought second-hand from the United States Government. There are unskilled pilots and others skilful, but reckless.

Barring dangerously bad weather, bad pilots and unsafe machines, flying is now safe. BUT BE CAREFUL.

Beginning on August 1, air passenger service from the Atlantic to the Pacific is promised, the trip to take thirty hours.

First will come a straight line air trip from San Francisco to Chicago with transfers to Los Angeles and Seattle. Then a San Francisco to New York Line, with the same transfers. Passenger ships will carry the mails, and flying will have started.

Judge: "So you robbed the restaurant because you were starving. Why didn't you take something to eat instead of looting the cash register?"

Prisoner: "I'm a proud man, yer honor, and I make it a rule to pay for what I eat."

How To Make Husbands Happy

Dear Miss Flo:— I am a serious minded girl of twenty-four—soon to be married to a very fine young chap who adores me now. But I am wondering if his love will endure throughout the years—and I want to know what I can do to keep him happy and in love with me always as he is now.

Your query presages well for your marriage. Too many young women today are more concerned about how to keep their husbands happy than they seem to feel that it is more the duty of a husband to keep his wife's love than of a wife to keep a husband's love. Naturally, that is never the way to start out on a successful marriage.

Whether or not the great love that is yours now will endure throughout the years will depend greatly upon yourself. Love is like a flower—it is to grow and flourish it must be carefully nurtured. Otherwise, it will wilt and die.

There are many excellent virtues which a wife—who wishes to be a successful one—should possess. It is important that she be a good housekeeper. She should be able to serve good meals, and she should be economical.

But excellent as these virtues are, they will not always keep a man in love. Rather, they are the things men expect in the women they marry and are not generally regarded by husbands as virtues for which they should be deeply grateful. They take them for granted, and it is only when they are not there they become conscious of them as virtues at all.

A woman's hold on a man, then is never in her ironclad virtues, but in those indulgences to his taste as a human being. It is the lure of additional things, such as a charming manner, a sympathetic interest, and amiability that holds the man's interest.

Give your husband enough rope that he will never feel the reins. Let him indulge in his harmless little hobbies, and recognize the fact that men must have men friends. Be indulgent and tolerant. Forgive his little faults and don't have hysterics every time he falls off the pedestal on which you have placed him. In other words, let him live his own life in conformity with his own ideas of how life should be enjoyed—rather than dictate to him your plans about how his life should be lived.

And don't ever deceive yourself into thinking that because you have captured your man that he will captive. It is a job that has to be done over and over again every morning.

Remember the arts and wiles with which you lured him into matrimony. Remember the pretty dresses you wore, the glad sweet smile with which you met him. The pleasure you showed when in his society. Make him feel that his wife cares enough for him to want to make herself attractive to him and that his coming home to you is the big event of the day.

Make yourself your husband's best friend. Interest yourself in whatever interests him. Take an interest in his work. All men like to talk shop, but they can't do it to women who yawn in their faces and who never take the trouble to hide the fact that they are bored to death with such conversation. There are many other rules which might be followed to advantage, but perhaps the best way to have loving and happy husbands is to be a loving wife, for if you are a loving wife, you will do those things naturally that tend to keep a husband in love with his wife throughout the years.

Percival: "Will you please marry me?" Helen: "Oh Pere, this is so sudden. Why?" Percival: "Well, I'll let you in on a secret. I want to take you home. My mother hasn't had a laugh in years."

He: "Do you think men are made of dust?" She (emphatically): "No. If they were, I imagine you'd dry up once in a while."

Himme: "What shape is a kiss?" Here: "Give me one and we'll call it square."

"I'm striking a happy medium," said the detective as he hit the fake spiritualist over the head.
