America's millions, who imagine they are thirsty for light wine, beer or something stronger, will be interested in this.

United States capital has recently lent nearly $300,000,000 to help foreign countries develop their liquor and beer business. Even in the Far East this country has financed liquor production to the tune of more than $5,000,000.

Mr. Hayward Kendall, who represents unorganized drinkers that ought to be saved from themselves, says: "The Eighteenth Amendment is saving America (in cash expenditures and increased efficiency) from six to eight billion dollars a year."

The nation's purchasing power has certainly increased amazingly since prohibition came.

In 1919 there were in America 6,500,000 automobiles. Now there are 20,000,000 and not enough. The country spends half a billion a year on radio, many millions for washing machines, vacuum cleaners, electric refrigerators. Workers in America spend more lavishly than the rich in Europe.

Mr. Kendall thinks it would be a national calamity if the outpouring of money were diverted from automobiles and radio to wine and beer.

While the boll weevil continues spreading in the United States Cairo telegraphs that: "Thanks to vigorous Government measures, the area affected by the boll worm has been considerably circumscribed."

Egyptian acreage affected by the pest has been reduced from 89,000 to 5,000 acres. What Egypt can do this country certainly ought to do. We have the scientists, the money and the boll weevils. What is the matter with us?

This news will not sell extra papers, like a Dempsey-Tunney fight, but will be important long after Dempsey and Tunney cease to be important. Pennsylvania State College has discovered that the vitamin B, so important to life, is manufactured by the cow in her stomach in great quantities.

Scientists cut a little door into the "rumen," or second stomach of the cow, and deprived her of all food containing vitamin B. Nevertheless in a little incubator in that second stomach the cow produced the precious vitamin B in profusion. That may mean to child life as much as the admirable fight against impure milk made by Nathan Straus.

In cities people go crazy more frequently than they once did. Excitement, bootleg liquor and other things help. In New York State one person in every twenty-five has been in the insane asylum, according to the American Psychiatric Association.

There is less insanity than formerly among people who are sane. Insanity, that used to drive them insane by the thousands, has been softened by telephone, radio, parcels post, and, above all, the automobile.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt says that people of Western Europe are divided by two things: science and religion; they occupy different fields. He wisely remarks that science, without religion would lead to hopeless materialism. Just as religion, when it denies the plain truths of science, leads to fanaticism and superstition.

Religion and science are like alchemy and chemistry. Astronomy started in astrology, chemistry started in alchemy, with experimenters seeking to make gold. Science started in religion, men questioning the origin of things, first gave a religious answer, everything based on miracles. Then they studied more closely and began giving scientific answers.

All told 24,000,000 automobiles are in use in fifty-five countries of the earth. The United States owns 20,000,000 of the 24,000,000. The United States Commerce Department gives the figures. We have one automobile for every six persons, Hawaii one to eleven, Canada one to thirteen. Afghanistan has one to 1,200,000. Poor Afghanistan, happy America. To have a motor is to defy the law of gravitation, and be a free man.

In Confidence

Readers desiring a personal reply can address Miss Flo, in care of this newspaper.

These Family Quarrels—Selfishness

Dear Miss Flo: It seems impossible for my husband and me to live together in agreement and harmony. We appear to be absolutely incompatible. And yet we do sincerely love each other. We have been married only five years, and three-quarters of that time has been spent in quarreling. Neither of us could tell a week later what the argument was about—yet for days at a time we will not speak. It makes both of us miserable.

We have considered divorce—but neither of us really want it. Can't you give us a formula for permanent peace?

It is ridiculous to say that the average husband and wife who are forever engaged in a debate over every point of controversy that comes up could not get along with each other if they really wanted to. They can get along with other persons, for they are willing to use tact and diplomacy in handling them. They make allowances for the prejudices and faults of others. They permit them to hold different opinions on all matters. They sidestep their tempers and their tongues when they are dealing with others.

And the rules for keeping the peace are the same everywhere. It seems to me that there can be only one logical reason why married couples quarrel so much—they enjoy it and get a thrill out of it. If it really made them as unhappy as they claim they would stop it, for no one will do indefinitely those things that make them miserable.

So they turn their homes into a battlefield on which a perpetual warfare goes on. And they do it, even when they realize that their whole life's happiness is at stake!

They evidently get a strange and almost savage joy out of stabbing with cruel words and by wounding the one they love and who love them. And even when all is forgiven the scars of the battle remain, to keep fresh in the memory always the bitterness of the quarrel.

There isn't a man who cannot be jollied along the way a wife wants him to go, or who does not respond to judiciously applied salve. Nor is there a woman living who will not eat of a husband's hand if he will show her a few attentions, a little affection, tenderness, consideration and pay her a few compliments.
