

Desire—Keep It Ever Green

That is a pretty good title. It is given to one of the recent Antioch College pamphlets and is very suggestive. There is nothing people need more in the world than desire. The great problem is not repressing desire or uprooting it, but properly nursing it.

We need desire all our lives. No great thing was ever done by a man without a great desire.

It was Napoleon's desire for fame that drove him forward, and Alexander's and Caesar's desire for conquest that actuated their efforts.

Marriage is rarely successful without a great desire.

A marriage merely for convenience, for money, for position, or for other reasons, is usually a failure.

There have been few business successes accomplished by those who had no desire to get forward, and few politicians achieve success without the proper amount of ambition.

Behind the whole human race in every race is the thing we call desire. It is the steam of the human engine. It is the urge in human accomplishment.

People do not fail so much because they want the wrong things. Some do. But most people do not succeed because they do not know what they want or do not want a thing hard enough.

Since desire is so essential in human accomplishment everything should be done to conserve it. All those false avenues of which desires are easily satisfied without great accomplishment are injurious.

The chief trouble with drinking alcohol is not its immediate toxic upon the system so much as it is the fact that it gives us a sense of satisfaction without due effort. The peace and content and hilarity that come after a good drink of whiskey properly come after doing a good job of work well. Those who are steady drinkers are very unreliable doers.

The sex desire properly conserved and limited is the foundation of the home. If it seeks its satisfaction in other channels the home life is weakened.

The efforts of mankind should be not to suppress nor destroy desire so much as to direct it into the proper channels and save its force for something worth while.

The greatest wasters are the wasters of desire. There is need of thrift in desire as well as in other things.

things. You never know when you may want it.

A college professor explains earthquakes by saying that Mother Earth shakes to gain symmetry. And we wonder if the young folks doing the popular dances shake for the same reason?
