The Evening Mode

The holiday season brings myriads of gay parties—and dances galore. And not only does the trim little miss in her teens look forward eagerly and anxiously to donning her first party frock, but also her lovely mother, looking younger than mothers have looked for generations, is quite as excited about her new smart evening gown, just purchased in the most exclusive shop of the town. This is the time of all the year when the evening mode is the important mode.

"La Mode"

A most appropriate frock for the holiday festivities. Fashioned along decidedly feminine lines of velvet and georgette, and gaily embroidered in white. The skirt, which is flared, has three tiers of black velvet. The round neck is smartly finished with a fold of black velvet.

parent and silk chiffon velvets are extremely popular. These are usually simply made with a slight flare and deep decollete neckline as the outstanding feature.

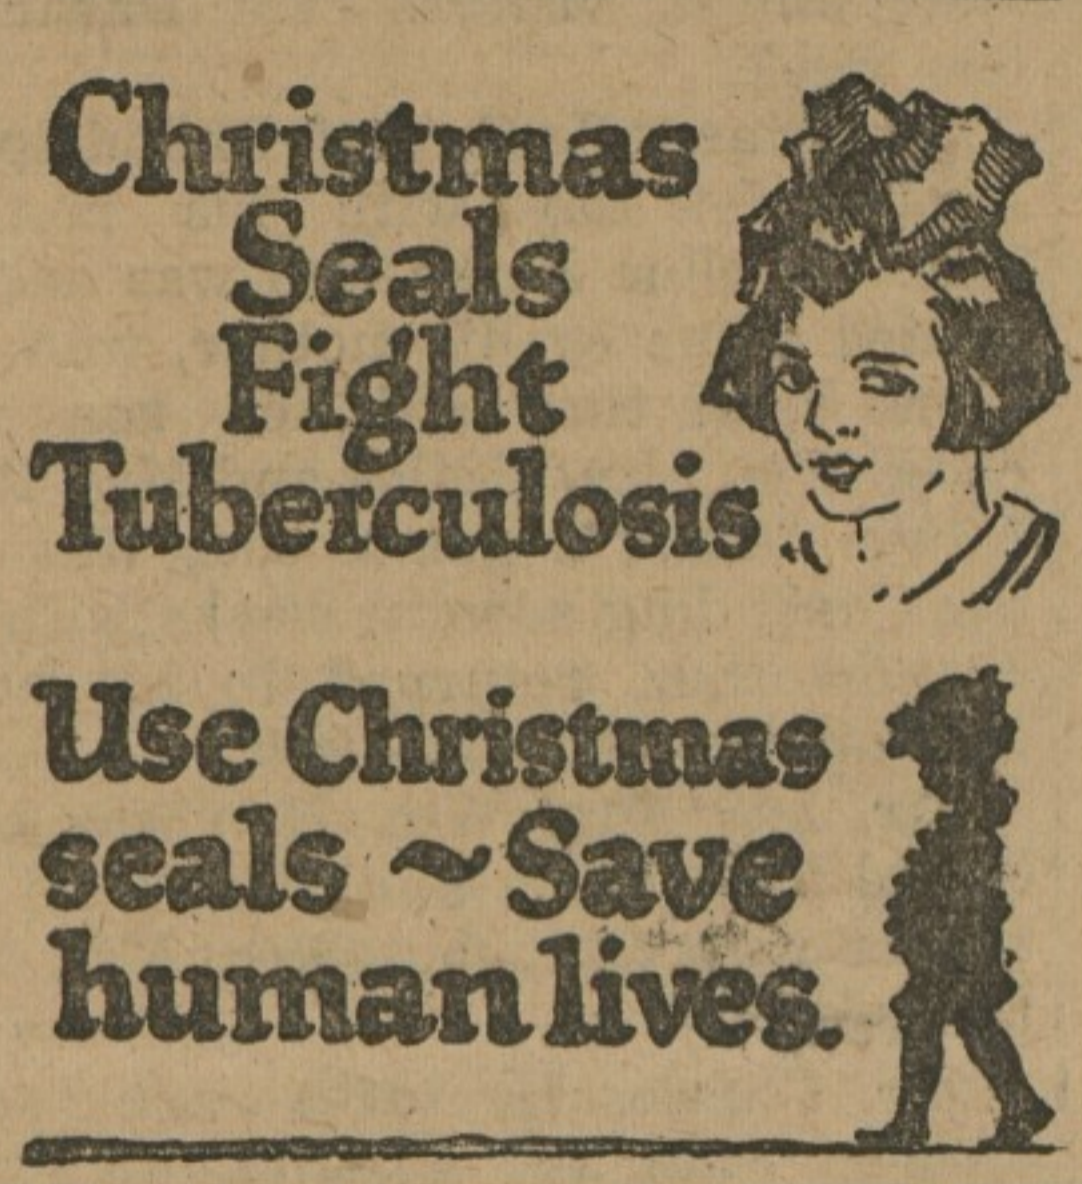

Exquisitely beaded crepes, reminding one of precious jewels as they scintillate in the brilliant lights on the dance floor, are also very smart and popular. Satins, laces and metal brocades are all very intriguing, too, especially when fashioned in the new flare effects.

The evening gown is not complete without the consideration of an accompanying pair of slippers. Each individual gown needs a distinct type of slipper. Gold and silver kidskin lead the evening footwear mode, for they are both chic and practical. Often a gold slipper will be smartly trimmed in silver kid or vice versa. Sometimes the two are woven in a checked effect. Brocades and colored satins are also worn. But the gem of all is a dainty model in gold kidskin with artistic blue forget-me-nots embossed upon the vamps and bordering the side.

"Ben-Hur" Big Drama Of Simple Emotions

The biggest things are the simplest. Not complexity of emotion, but its depth and truth mark real greatness. In the instance of "Ben-Hur," the film coming next week to the Lyceum Theatre, love and revenge are the supreme motives. Revenge—to overthrow the Roman who destroyed the House of Hur; Love, an inconsolable passion that makes its hero search the wide world over to find his lost mother and sister, and Love, the flowering of youth's emotions to his true mate, Esther; these are the keys to Ben-Hur's heart, and these are the elements of appeal that make his story so engrossing. This marvelous story has now been pictured for the first time from the world-famous novel and stage play, and will be presented at the Lyceum Theatre on Jan. 6th, 6th and 7th. The great motives of the picture find their climax in the Antioch Chariot Race when Ben-Hur overthrows his enemy Massala and in the wondrous ending where Esther finds the lost ones and brings them to the Savior to be healed.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear wife and our mother Sarah E. Jones, who departed this life two years ago, Dec. 6th, 1925.

I miss you more and more each day. None but a husband's heart can tell. The time will come, I can not when, That I may with you dwell.

Surrounded by friends, I am lonesome.
In the midst of pleasure I am blue,
A smile on my face and a headache,
Always thinking of you.
By Her Loving Husband.

A wonderful mother, woman and aid,
One who was better God never made,
A wonderful worker, so loyal and true,
One in a million—that mother was you.
By Her Loving Daughter
Nora and Husband.

We do not forget her, we love her too dearly,
For her memory to fade from our lives like a dream,
Our lips need not speak when our hearts mourn sincerely,
For grief often dwells, where it seldom is seen.
By Her Loving Son
Earl and Family.

Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love remembrance outlasts all,
And though the years be many or few,
They are filled with remembrance,
Mother of you.
By Her Loving Sons,
Wilson and Hynson.

Gone from our home, oh, how we miss her,
Loving her dearly, her memory we'll keep,
Not till life ends shall we forget her,
Sacred to us is the place where she sleeps.
By Her Loving Daughter,
Sallie and Daughter.

We mourn for you, Dear Mother,
Though not in outward show,
For the heart that mourns sincerely,
Mourns silently and low.
By Her Loving Son
Howard and Family.

Sweet memories will linger forever,
Time cannot change them its true,
Years that may come cannot sever,
Our loving remembrance of you,
By Her Loving Grandson,
Vickers and Family.
