Today To Consult Federal Authorities

Governor Harrington is not losing any time furthering the Bay bridge prject. He called a meeting last Thursday afternoon in his office in the Union Trust Building, throne which was attended by the members of the Executive Committee named at the Annapolis meeting for the purpose of mapping out the preliminary plans. There were present, besides the Governor, ex-Governor Philips Lee Goldsborough, former Mayor J. In separate lines we have stood, Barry Mahool, William H. All the members of the committee were enthusiastic in their support of The creeds that we speak, we must the undertaking, but before taking definite action it was deemed best to await the report of the special committee which is to go to Washington today, January 15, to ascertain whether the War Department would consent to the bridge over the Bay, the federal government having jurisdiction where such a structure goes over navigable waters. Meanwhile, however, the cost of the bridge to the state and the manner of securing the money was fully discussed. It was the judgment of all that if it were made a memorial bridge as much as two millions of dollars could be obtained by subscriptions in the state, city, Western Maryland and the Eastern Shore. According to the specifications proposed, the Governor gave the opinion that the net cost to the state would not exceed ten million dollars. The maintenance fund and the money needed to meet the interest charges on serial bonds, together with the sinking fund, could be obtained by making this a toll bridge. As the bridge will cut ment set amid the contrasting scenes June 17, 1861; October 4, 1862. Apply, SAMUEL J. COMLY, Locust
