Burns and his Highland Mary.

Fair lady, that I come to you A stranger bard, ful weel I ken But when I speak o' gliding Ayr, O' hawthorn shades and fragrant ferns, O' Doon and Highland Mary fair, Mayhap ye'll think o' Robert Burns.

I am the lad-and why I'm here. I heard the guide-dame when she said She'd know, in joyous spirit sphere, If Burns was wi' his Mary wed. I sought to tell her o' our joy -Na muckle impress could I make-And lady, I have flown to see If ye'd my message to her take.

Tell her that when I passed from earth, My angel lassie, crown'd wi' flowers, Met me wi' glowing love-lit torch, And led me to the nuptial bowers; That all we'd dream'd o' wedded bliss, And more was meted to us there-And sweeter was my dearie's kiss

Where love's celestial fountains play'd And myrtle twined, our couch to shade, And while by angel-harps were play'd The bonnie "bridal serenade," Burns was wi' Highland Mary wed!

There's no destroying death-frost here The bridal tour is through the spheres-Eternity the "honey moon." And now, my lady if you will bear These words unto the anxious dame,
