"It is not our purpose to argue the comparative merits of the system adopted at the North in contrast with that which existed at the formation of the Government and is still adhered to in the Southern States—although from the personal opportunities we have had of observing the operations of both systems, and from much reflection given to the subject we are satisfied we could show conclusively to any reasonable or intelligent person that the latter is far more humane towards the negroes than the former. Instead of having been elevated by the newly adopted Northern system the negroes have been degraded and made more miserable; so that each successive census shows them to be perishing off under its operation, while under the primitive system (prevalent) DISTRICT NOMINATIONS. at the North as well as the South at the formation of our Confederacy) they are rapidly increasing."-Banner of liberty, a Democratic Journal, published at Middletown, N. Y.

Want of space alone prevents us from multiplying these extracts from the writings and speeches of the prominent Democrats of the North; for it is truly refreshing to contrast their sentiments with those of the Opposition in that section of the Confederacy. No nobler men ever trod the soil of the American continent than the Democrats of the Northern States who, in defending the constitutional rights of their Southern bretheren have exposed themselves to vituperations and persecutions of which we can have no adequate conception. And these fearless patriots have hitherto saved the Union from destruction; for if the Opposition in the North, some of whom say that they wish to see our streets "run with blood to the horses" bridles," while others would "hail as the dawn of a political millenium" the "day when the black man armed with British bayonets and led on by British officers shall wage a war of extermination against his master." and "when the torch of the incendiary shall light up the towns and cities of the South"-if these implacable enemies of our institutions should ever obtain the control of the Government, the South would be driven to secession, and would be compelled to seek for its safety in a separate nationality.
