Balance on hand subject to the further order of Trustees In adition to the above amount of expenditures there is now due to the different pay-masters of pensioners for the first quarter of the present year the sum of $155,00, the payment of which was deferred on account of the new building. You will see from the above amount that we have paid Mr. Allen the sum of $1000,00 on account of the new building, leaving a balance in his favor of $500,00, which will be due on its completion, probably about the middle of June. The Taxpayers of the county appear not rightly to understand the nature of these surplusses on hand and for sale, the largest and best aswhich remain on hand, at the time of making out our account with the county, each year. It is sortment of Spring & Summer Clothing, at not, in reality, a surplus. It is only a balance in our favor to carry on the institution until the first of January ensuing of each year. You are aware that the Levy which you are now about to be called on to make for the use of the Alms House is not available until the first of next . January, or six months after the Levy. and if the Trustees had nothing on hand, the account balanced, they would either have to stop the benefits of the Institution until the first of January, or anticipate the payment from the Collector by a loan. The Trustees ask of you a levy of $1500, 00, on account of the new building, and $1600,00 for general purposes, which sums added their unexpended balance will make the sum of $3572,68, for them or their successors' use, for " the ensuing year.

POETICAL GLEANINGS.

[From Graham's Magazine for August.] Words of Waywardness.

BY PROFESSOR WM. CAMPBELL. HAH! for the tide of the blood's hot gush-Hah! for the throng of proud thoughts that rush, While et Reckless and riotous-why should they be Iced by thy frown, Reality?

Give, give me back the early joy Of youth's warm hopes, of vows believed-Again, again a dreaming boy Let me be happy—though deceived. Friendship, they say, is but a name, And woman's love a meteor flame, That feedeth upon fancy's breath A little while, then perisheth. Out, out upon thee—out on thee!

Thou hideous hag, Reality. Hah! tears again! dost ask me why The tear upon this burning cheek, The half repressed, yet bursting sigh? The tear, the sigh, themselves must speak; Must tell a tale of by-gone hours, A vision of all fair and bright-When my young path was strewn with flowers, And every throb was of delight. When joys were of each moment's birth, Nor care, nor doubt, as instant stole From days of ever-changeful mirth, That changeless shone upon the soul.

When hopes, that in mist-distance gleaming, In promise e'en outvied the past, Came ever, halcyon heralds seeming, Of peace and bliss for aye to last. But where is now the sportive wile Of youth—so guileless and so gay— The soul of love, of fire—the smile, That spoke that soul-oh! where are they? Of days that could such joys impart What now remains? Their memory-

A cheerless, blasted youth—a heart That breaketh fast, though silently. And those proud hopes so fondly cherished, Have they too proved, like Friendship, breath? the Ay, one by one, they all have perished— Yet no-not all-there yet is death! There yet remains to choose some spot, Where, far from man and scorn, to lie-And there, unheeded and forgot, Alone-oh! God-alone to die.

Who talks of dying, while around The earth's so fair, the sky so bright? With Folly's wreath let day be crowned, And Mirth and Music rule the night. Another chord—the purple hills Are bowing to the yellow vales— The vales are smiling to the rills-The rills make music for the gales, That with the sunbeams twining hands, Through groves & meads & streams are glanc-Adown the lanes, and on the sands Of brave old Ocean madly dancing. And brave old Ocean roareth so His honest laugh, to see those Misses, The pretty flow'rets bending low, As though to shun the wind-god's kisses.

Kisses-hah! hah!-around this string Of other days what memories twine-Bring, merry comrades, quickly bring Youth-giving and song-making wine. Fill, fill-on the faithful brim Pile up the sparkling flood-Drink, drink, till the living stream Run conqueror through the blood. Drink to the hill, the vale, The stream and its jeweled brink, To the warming ray and the cooling gale,

Or loving or glad to be-Nor wait to ask if those joyous beams Be nature's hypocrisy. I've quaffed the brimming bowl In mirth's and madness' hours-And drenched my thirsty soul In goblets crowned with flowers. Of draughts so pure as this

To earth and to ocean drink.

Drink to each thing that seems

'Tis luxury to sip, But draught of purer bliss Doth dwell on woman's lip. I've felt the glowing sun Steal warmly to my heart's Faint throbs, when gazing on The skies of southern parts.

A purer, warmer sky, Of joy-embathing light, Is found in woman's eye. 'Neath holy Music's spell

But oh! a sun more bright,
