[From the Boston Olive Branch.] THE DEPARTED.

The tender ties by death dissolved, Have yet a living power-And memories, angel-robed, still haunt The heart's dismantled bower. From earth released, from sorrow free, And purged from every worldly lust,

They mingle in their viewless forms With Earth's poluted dust; Though to our sense no power is given To scan the mystic shapes they wear-

We feel at time a mystic awe, And know unearthly ones are near!

TRUE LOVELINESS.

BY CHARLES SWAIN. She who thinks a noble heart Better than a noble mien-Honors virtue more than art, Though 'tis less in fashion seen-Whatsoe'er her fortune be, She's the bride—the wife—for me!

She who deems that inward grace Far surpasses outward show, She who values less the face Than that charm the soul can throw-Whatsoe'er her fortung be, She's the bridg—the wife—for me!

She who knows the heart requires Something more than lips of dew-That when love's brief rose expires, Love itself dies with it too-Whatsoe er her fortune be, She's the bride—the wife—for me!

How a Girl lost her Loyer.

CARRY ME BACK. Virginia's woods were clothed in green, When from my home I turned, With hope to win undying same, My youthful genius burned:

Oh, carry me back to old Virginia, To old Virginia's shore. I'm dying, dying, all alone, And not a friend is near, No brother's voice, no sister's sigh, Falls on my dying ear.

I'm dying now in a foreign land,

Life's cherished dream is o'er;

Oh, for a heart that loves me now, Ere life's wild dream is o'er; To carry me back to old Virginia, To old Virginia's shore. If it may not be-'neath Italia's sky Oh let me gently sleep,

THE GAMES OF LIFE. The little Miss at three years old, Plays with Doll, and prattles; But little Master, stout and bold, Plays with drums and rattles. The boy, detesting musty books,

And Miss, grown older, studies looks, And plays with looking-glasses. The jolly toper, fond of fun, Plays with his friends at drinking;

Loves romping with the lasses;

The sportsman plays with dog and gun, And wise men play at thinking. The constable, skill'd in the trade, Will play at "body-snatching;" The tailor, with his legs cross-laid,

Oft takes a game at patching. The beauty, full of haughty airs, When young, plays at tormenting; But wrinkled, turns to other cares, All sports at last repenting.

Young Galen, apish in his looks, With physic, plays at killing; The lawyer, learned in his books, Will play at pocket-filling.

Wretched, from self-created wo, The miser's game is hoarding; And when he meets his country's foe, The sailor plays at boarding.

The alderman with bloated face, A glutton plays at eating: And such as long to have a place. In Congress, play at treating.

With leger busied, merchants take A game at calculation; And ministers too often make, A plaything of the nation.

With looks profound, and thoughtful mind, Projectors play at scheming; 'Till worn with care, at last they find They've all along been dreaming.

The lover, and woful wan, Plays day and night at fretting; While laughing at the silly man, His Delia sports co-quetting.

Cowards, while none but cowards nigh, Are fond of gasconading, And courtiers fawn, and cringe, and lie, And play at masquerading.

The lounger plays at killing time, The soldier plays at slaying; The poet plays at making thyme, The Methodist at praying.

And thus all play together; Till death at last disturbs the game, And stops the play forever. G. R. C.d "V
