COURTSHIP.

Miss Susky Smith had flaxen hair; Her daddy had the pewter; Her eyes were gray and looked serene Upon her favorite suitor.

That suitor was a jolly youth,
And nimble, little, and brawny; The yellow-fever took him off One day in California.

*And when I heard that he was gone-"It's now," said I, "or never! I shaved myself and greased my shoes, And tried to look quite clever.

> 1 rigged myself from tip to toe, And caught and mounted Robin; But all the way I rode along My heart kept up a throbbin'.

And when I reached her daddy's house, It still kept up a thumpin'; But when I saw that lovely maid, It kinder stopped a jumpin.'

'Twas half-past ten when at her feet I knelt, and yet e'er dinner, With honeyed speech and winning ways I had contrived to win her,

Some months elapsed—to set the day I now began to press her: 1 urged, entreated, plead in vain-In vain did I caress her.

While matters were thus crossed and spiled My clothes all growing seedy, My rival from the mines returned, Still for my Sukey greedy. I saw him kinder sidle up, And slip his arm around her;

When-heaven and earth-she let him kiss Those precious lips! confound her! I told her that I was surprised— My eyes had sure deceived me; And asked her to renew her vows, And from suspense relieve me.

When don't you think the tarnal gal, Her thumb upon her smeller, Her fingers wriggled as she said-"Can't come it little feller!"
