THE QUAKER GRAVE-YARD. Four straight brick walls, severely plain, A quiet city square surround; A level space of nameless graves, The Quakers' burial-ground,

In gown of gray or coat of drab They trod the common ways of life, With passions held in sternest leash, And hearts that knew not strife. To you grim meeting-house they fared, With thoughts as sober as their speech, To voiceless prayer, to songless praise, To hear the elders preach. Through quiet lengths of day they came. With scarce a change to this repose; Of all life's loveliness they took The thorn without the rose.

But in the porch and o'er the graves Glad rings the southward robin glee; And sparrows fill the autumn air With merry mutiny; While on the graves of drab and gray

The red and gold of autumn lie, And willful Nature decks the sod In gentlest mockery.
