

pointed out, & when we reached the door was the furnace. I think soon we went to the furnace & took off the cover, & put them back as, & took one writing, & when I decided that to let it remain as it was.
What was taken out was said to be a piece of bone. There were two pieces of mineral & there had pots lying on the top of the furnace. - as far as I know they remained as they were.

While Dr. W. was in the laboratory, I think soon we held him by the door. He called for water, & it was brought to him & he attempted to drink, but he was so agitated he could not. I can describe his manner. He appeared different from any man I had seen before. When the water was handed to his mouth he would seem to suck at it as though it were offensive - like a dead creature.
- He was more excited in the laboratory than when of Stair. He was more calm of Stair than any time I saw him. - I think this water was brought him before the remains were seen. - They all went out of the laboratory to the back door together, & they did not return there. The call for water was before we went to the back door.
