

Now precisely as I found it — When those were thrown out Kealator Babman, Glandwick's Man & I think Q. men present. — We were all sent down by the City Marshall to take away things. The Thorax fell ^{out} with back up. I saw the hole after I turned the body over.
As soon as I turned the body over, I discovered the hole in the side. — I drew the knife some way out of the thorax — the string was tied round the bone at the lower joint. The string was two tied ~~round~~ the thorax; but the bone of the knife. No one looked at with a stick till after the coroner's day got there. They for them about 4 o'clock. They had an rule when I found the tea chest. — Butman had a stick in his hand. I directed him not to touch it. I said 'we are opening Paulston here any stick in his hand. He said he was going to scrape it. I saw then he did not touch it; but had he been going to scrape it off. After that was not taken off till the next day.
Nothing of the bone but the thickest was brushed off. I did that with my hand.
— The neck end of the Thorax was up in the ice chest. Think I feel my hand up my wind into the case before I fell the body.
— at Cambridge. Thompson went with me