MISCELLANY.

HUMAN LOVE.

Oh! if there is one law above the rest,

Written in Wisdom-if there is a word That I would trace as with a pen of fire, Upon the unsullied temper of a child-If there is any thing that keeps the mind Open to angel's visits, and repels The ministry of ill-'tis human love! God has made nothing worthy of contempt; The smallest pebble is the well of Truth, Has its peculiar meanings, and will stand When Man's best monuments wear fast away. The law of Heaven is love-and though its name Has been usurped by passion and profaned To its unholy uses through all time, Still, the external principle is pure; And in those deep affections that we feel Omnipotent within us, can we see The lavish measure in which love is given; And in the yearning tenderness of a child For every bird that sings above its head, And every creature feeding on the hills, Ard every tree and flower, and running brook; We see how every thing was made to love; And how they err who, in a world like this,

Find any thing to hate but human pride.
